FBI Reveals Drills, Rifle Practice by D. C. Nazis

Investigation Made For Dies Probe Sets Bund Membership In U. S. at 6,600

By Felix Cotten.

The National Capital in recent years has been the scene of organized Nazi activity, including drills by uniformed "storm troopers" wearing swastika emblems and target practice at outings with 22-caliber rifles, the Justice Department revealed yesterday.

The disclosure was made in the 14-volume report of the Federal Bureau of Investigation on the activities of the German-American Bund, made public at the request of the Dies committee investigating un-American activities.

The G-men, meanwhile, said their investigation had been hampered by the refusal of Fritz Kuhn, national leader of the Bund, to make available membership books and records. As a result, they were unable to ascertain precisely the total membership of the organization.

Their inquiry, they said, did not bear out Kuhn's statement that membership totaled 8,299. They estimated the number at 6,600, but emphasized that this was only an estimate.

Kuhn, the F. B. I. said, participated with Adolf Hitler in the famous beer cellar putsch in Munich on November 9, 1923.

D. C. Group Disbanded

The local organization—which was associated with the "Friends of the New Germany"—disbanded in the spring of 1936, according to information given the FBI, as a result of orders from Germany decreeing that no subject of the Nazi state should belong. Of the 35 local members, 31 were Nazi subjects and only 4 were American citizens.

That part of the report relating to District activity, the FBI revealed, was based in large part on an interview with Werner Barthelmess, 35 Madison street northwest, who "according to our information was alleged to be the leader of the local unit." Barthelmess is a photo-engraver employed by a local establishment.

Ten of the members of the District organization, the report stated, were members of the Ordnungsdienst of the Friends of the New Germany. These were the storm troopers, but they were said to be entirely different from the storm troopers of Germany.

Weekly Drills Held

They wore a special uniform of white with a red, white and black armband, carrying a swastika. They had drills once a week. Their purpose, however, according to information given the F. B. I., was to maintain order at meetings. Five or six members of the local unit were German World War veterans.

The storm troopers, according to the F. B. I. narrative, engaged in a fight with "alleged Communists" at a special meeting two or three years ago at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 920 Tenth street northwest. A Russian priest, the G-men were informed, delivered an address. Communists attempted, it was said, to disrupt the meeting.

Individual members of the local unit, the F. B. I. was told, had 22-caliber rifles "and occasionally when

Schwartz Child's Kidnapers Guilty Only of Assault

New York, (Tuesday) April 4 (AP) — Charles Mitchell, 31, and Sol Schwartz, 29, who admitted abducting the 4-year-old son of Mitchell's "best friend," Michael Katz, for $180 ransom, were acquitted of kidnaping charges early today, and were convicted of second degree assault, entailing a possible prison term of five years.

Baltimore, Md., April 3 (INS).—Florence Baker, 27, Washington divorcee who horrified hundreds yesterday by threatening for 20 minutes to leap from a third-floor ledge of a downtown hotel was released today in custody of her mother.

The mother, Mrs. Emma Baker, said her daughter, a former Government employe, recently suffered a nervous breakdown.

Mill Wins $712,000 As Sit-Down Damage

Union and Its President Held Responsible For Losses Under First Judgment Since Supreme Court Ruling on Strikes

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 3.—A labor union and its president were held responsible today for damage in a sit-down strike in the Apex hosiery mill and were ordered to pay the company nearly $712,000.

The verdict of a Federal court jury of eight women and four men blamed Branch 1, American Federation of Hosiery Workers (C. I. O.), and William Leader, its president. The strike lasted 48 days in 1937.

The jury's finding was the first of its kind since the United States Supreme Court ruled sit-down strikes illegal a few weeks ago.

LEADER

Benjamin Simons, defense attorney announced he would appeal the verdict, which does not make the union's 16,000 members subject to attachment.

The jury assessed damage to the company's property and business at $237,310, but under a finding that the strike affected interstate commerce this amount was trebled automatically to $711,932. The Sherman anti-trust act made such a ruling by Judge William H. Kirkpatrick mandatory, he had instructed.

Originally, the Apex Co. asked $1,171,957. This was pared in court by a special master to $434,574 and cut further by the jury to the final figure of $237,310.

MEYER

The trial arose from seizure of the Apex factory by strikers and strike sympathizers on May 8, 1937. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals ordered the sitdowners to leave June 23.

Evidence was presented alleging that only 8 of the 2,500 Apex workers were members of the union before the strike started. William Meyer, president of the company,

SEC Studies Small Business Credit Needs

Hopkins Asks Congress To Aid Little Men In Scientific Research

The small businessman occupied the spotlight in the Administration's recovery drive yesterday as the Securities and Exchange Commission launched a study of his credit needs and the Commerce Department asked Congress to provide him with the benefits of scientific research.

The SEC study, a part of the monopoly inquiry, is designed to build up a body of "case histories" as to what small businessmen feel they need in the way of long and short-term credit, why they can't get it and where it might be obtained.

Frank Tired of Talks

Commerce Secretary Hopkins, in a letter to Representative Lea (Democrat), of California, chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, recommended that a pending bill to promote business and economic research and to establish research stations in the states to co-operate with the department be changed in such a way that advantages would be extended particularly to small business, which he said has been "handicapped by a lack of facilities for research essential to efficient operation."

Jerome Frank, SEC representative on the President's monopoly committee, said the credit needs of small business had been a subject of discussion too long. The SEC therefore, will start from scratch, and with no preconceived opinions will try to find out the facts.

Other Areas Marked Off

The study is being made in co-operation with the Junior Chamber of Commerce and follows discussions between Philip C. Eberling, president of that organization, and SEC Chairman William O. Douglas, recently appointed to the Supreme Court.

Special attention will be given the South, which President Roosevelt has described as the Nation's No. 1 economic problem. Birmingham has been chosen as the center of this study, Frank said.

Other sections to be studied closely are the area of textile production

Senate Votes Cotton Bill; West Seeks Aid

Central States Want Subsidies on Many Farm Products

By Robert C. Albright.

Domestic and export subsidies for a wide range of surplus farm commodities gained support in the Senate yesterday after cotton blazed the trail with Senate approval of a bill according special benefits to cotton growers.

A newly-organized mid-western farm bloc began work on a "unified" counter program as Southern Senators prepared to call up for action today a second cotton measure providing direct subsidies of 3 cents a pound to cotton farmers.

Meanwhile the Senate approved and sent to the House the Bankhead cotton bill permitting farmers to repossess 2,000,000 bales of Government loan cotton on payment of 5 cents a pound.

Westerners Organize

Demanding solution of the farm surplus problem "as a whole," Western corn, wheat and dairy Senators organized for an attempt to head off special treatment of the cotton problem.

They will ask defeat of the second peg in the series of cotton measures and formulate a rival program under which all surplus commodities would share in increased Federal assistance.

Informally discussed with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace yesterday was a plan whereby a "minimum" of $175,000,000 would be appropriated for farm parity payments, and another $240,000,000 would be made available for promoting domestic and export sales of surplus produce.

To Aid Dairy Sales

For aiding domestic and export sales of dairy and farm products, chiefly butter and pork products, principally lard; as well as citrus fruits, eggs, wheat and cotton, an appropriation of from $140,000,000 to $150,000,000 will be asked on top of the $90,000,000 already available from customs receipts.

In the case of lard and butter, some form of export subsidy may be sought in addition to larger domestic marketings through the

Mrs. Stinson Gave Fortune But Resented Tips, Court Told

Mrs. Pepita Crounse Stinson, wealthy widow who seeks annulment of her marriage to Joseph Whitla Stinson, was pictured in District Court yesterday by her nurse-companion as a woman who could calmly settle $230,000 on the man she planned to marry—and then "fly into a tantrum" when a waitress was tipped too much.

"She watched tray service charges very closely and usually went to the dining room for breakfast, if it cost extra in bed," Miss Jessica Shoemaker declared.

Miss Shoemaker, a quiet-spoken witness who joined the Crounse household in 1931 and nursed the plaintiff's former husband, William Livingstone Crounse, in his last illness, nervously pulled two handkerchiefs to pieces during her testimony and almost ruined a pair of brown kid gloves before her attorney rescued them.

On at least three occasions, according to the nurse, the engagement of Mrs. Crounse and Stinson was near the calling-off point because of little sums of money. After an evening at the Mayflower Hotel, during which dinner was ordered and returned, and there was "much bickering," Stinson gave the waiter a dollar and Mrs. Crounse "hit the ceiling," Miss Shoemaker said.

In New York he once paid night club musicians $2 to play "Ave Maria" for Mrs. Crounse, but she overlooked the sentiment and berated him for his extravagance, according to the nurse. And in Bar Harbor just before the wedding, Miss Shoemaker said, she got angry with him for tipping the waitress after a sin-

Boy Bandit Admits Taxi Shooting

Father Surrenders Training School Youth, 17; Victim's Wallet Found

A 17-year-old inmate of the National Training School yesterday confessed shooting and robbing Martin P. Bartschek, cab driver.

The crime was committed a few hours after the leave of absence from the school expired Sunday night, police said.

He was due to come up for parole within two months, it was learned.

The lad was turned over to the Harbor Precinct police by his father, who located him after a frantic search with training school officers Sunday night had proved fruitless.

Driver's Wallet Found

Police said the boy guided them to a wooded lot near Canal road and Weaver place northwest, where Bartschek's wallet was found.

Of several stories the boy told, police said, the most plausible was that he shot Bartschek in an argument over cab fare. They said he told them he hailed the cab at Eleventh and M streets southeast and ordered it driven to Great Falls, Va.

On Canal road, according to the reported confession, he entered into an argument with Bartschek and ordered the cab halted. When this was not done, he leveled the gun at the driver and it was discharged in a scuffle.

Victim to Be Cripple

Police said the boy added he went from the scene by street car and bus to Great Falls. His father, suspecting he might have gone there when he failed to report at the training school, went to Great Falls and brought him back. He did not connect his son with the shooting.

At Georgetown Hospital Bartschek's chances of recovery last night were described as "better than even." A bullet which passed through his temple lodged in the skull without entering the brain, doctors said.

Should he recover, surgeons said, it is probable he will be crippled for life.

38 Bullets in Body

The 53-year-old driver already carries 38 bullets in his body from service in the Spanish-American and World wars.

Dr. Manly B. Root, acting superintendent of the training school last night told The Post that Bartschek's assailant Sunday was enjoying the monthly visit with his family granted inmates with good behavior records after eight or nine months in the school.

The boy had been in the school a year, Dr. Root said, after conviction on juvenile delinquency charges in connection with automobile thefts.

Had Pistol at Home

At the youth's home, a modest yellow bungalow, his grief-stricken family explained the lad's father called for him at 10 a. m. Sunday and was to have returned him to the school in the evening. At 6:30 p. m., they said, the boy left the house, explaining he would be back in "just a few minutes."

"He had such a good record out at the school, I don't see how he could have done this," the youth's mother said.

Police last night were unable to locate the .25-caliber automatic revolver which the youth said he had picked up at his home Sunday. His mother said, "We had no idea he was keeping a gun here."

'Cotton Ed' Tells Montgomery He Likes Mae West

When handsome Robert Montgomery, screen star, was testifying yesterday at the Senate hearing on the bill to prohibit block booking of films, Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith, of South Carolina, asked whether he knew Mae West. Montgomery replied that he had been denied that pleasure.

"Oh, gracious," the Senator exclaimed. "Even though we are old we still like to look."

To a remark that Mae West now is more popular with exhibitors than with the public, the Senator observed:

"The exhibitors are closer to her."

Britain Invites All Nations To Resist Hitler 'Domination;' U. S. Asks Bids on 8 Warships

Proposals Sought Even Before Funds Are Voted in Move To Speed Program

President Roosevelt acted yesterday to speed up the naval building program as the dynamite-laden European situation held the attention of Administration circles.

Under new procedure approved by the President, bids were called for on eight warships in next year's building program, although Congress has not appropriated funds for their construction. By "anticipating" 1940 ship construction money, officials said, vessels can be allocated to building yards months ahead of normal schedule.

Similar anticipatory procedure is being followed as to ships to be constructed in Government yards and it is expected that the entire 1940 program, including the two "super battleships," will be laid down shortly after appropriations are made available.

Meanwhile, a House sub-committee approved plans to train 100,000 civilian air pilots in the next five years as a reserve for the Army and Navy. Th group redrafted the Administration's air training program, limiting its life to five years and barring the Civil Aeronautics Authority from purchasing land in connection with the plan.

Seek Test of Project

Chairman Lea (Democrat), of California, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, who with ranking members of that body made up the sub-committee, said they felt the setup should be temporary until thoroughly tested.

The sub-committee also struck out of the bill provision for a CAA administration building at Gravelly Point National Airport here, and provided that all instructors under the training program should be employed by the CAA in a civilian status. The original measure contemplated calling retired and reserve Army and Navy officers to active duty.

Funds for the eight ships on which bids were invited yesterday are included in the President's budget estimates now being considered by a House appropriations subcommittee. Four are submarines and four are destroyers of a new type. The remaining ships in the 1940 program, two 45,000-ton battleships, two cruisers, four submarines and four destroyers, will be built in navy yards, officials indicated.

12 Ships Under Way

Under the "speed up" program, preliminary work is already under way for the 12 ships to be built in Government yards. As bids on the 8 ships must be submitted by May 24, it is estimated the program will be in shape for allocation by the time the appropriation is passed.

One of the new "super-battleships" of 45,000 tons will be built in the New York Navy Yard and the other probably in the Philadelphia Navy Yard, it is understood. These yards are being expanded to take care of the new "giants." Six 35,000-ton battleships are now being built or projected, three in navy yards and three in commercial yards.

Roosevelt Signs Army Air Defense, Reorganizing Bills

By the Associated Press.

Warm Spring, Ga., April 3.—President Roosevelt tonight signed the $358,000,000 emergency Army air defense bill and the Government reorganization measure.

He had ten days to act, but affixed his signature to both long before that time was up.

The rearmament bill authorizes most of the money for an increase to 6,000 in Army plane strength.

No Married Men Wanted by Army

No married men are wanted under the Army's expansion plans, officials ruled yesterday.

Holding that a wife is a handicap to a young officer, the War Department issued regulations limiting new appointments as lieutenants to applicants who are "single and never previously married."

The order particularly refers to Reserve officers and college graduates who will be taken into the Regular Army in considerable numbers over the next few years, as West Pointers now are barred from marrying until commissioned.

Soviets Deny Any Pledge of Aid to Poland

Moscow Disclaims Even Reported Offer of Embargo on Reich

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, April 3.—Any intimation that Soviet Russia has promised to aid Poland in case of war—even with such efforts as an embargo on raw material shipments to Germany—was rejected sharply in a communique tonight.

Reports published in France alleged that the Soviet Union "undertook or promised to undertake, in case of war, to supply Poland with war material and close to Germany its market of raw materials," said the communique, issued through Tass (Soviet official news agency).

Formal Denial Unusual

"Tass is authorized to state that this report does not correspond with the facts as the Soviet Union neither gave anyone such promises nor undertook such obligations."

Much interest was aroused by the communique, since the Soviet government seldom goes to the length of issuing a formal statement to deny foreign newspaper reports.

This, however, was the second time Moscow formally has denied offering aid to Poland. The first was on March 21.

View on Aggression

Some foreign observers interpreted tonight's statement as an effort to emphasize what already has been suggested in recent Soviet press comment—that the U. S. S. R. is interested in continuing collective security, but not in efforts to "erect a fence against aggression in one place" and thereby merely divert it in another direction.

Hull Blames Reich's Trade Loss on Nazis

German Policies Paralyzing World Markets, He Charges

By William V. Nessly.

Secretary of State Hull replied scornfully yesterday to German complaints of loss of trade with the United States by declaring the Reich's economic ills are of her own making.

He charged Germany has adopted a trade policy that "paralyzes world markets."

He defiantly warned that American trade "does not have to" fit itself "into the crevices of German need left by the barter agreements that Germany has already made with other countries."

And he plainly questioned statements that Germany was about to buy considerable amounts of American surplus crops just when this country placed 25 per cent countervailing duties against German goods in retaliation for discrimination against the foreign commerce of the United States.

Seeks Source of Stories

In a blunt formal statement and in remarks at his press conference, the Secretary replied to a speech last week by Dr. Walther Funk, German minister of economics, and to an interview given by Dr. Hans Thomsen, charge d'affaires at the German Embassy here, printed in The Post yesterday.

Told of a German Embassy statement that Germany was arranging to buy large quantities of American wheat, cotton and lard when the new countervailing duties blocked

Climber Strangled, Hanging 1,000 Feet in Air From Cliff

By International News Service.

Cold Spring, N. Y., April 3.—Swinging at a rope's end like a pendulum, Irving Feigin, 20-year-old Eustis, Fla., mountain climber and musician studying in New York City, strangled to death this afternoon 1,000 feet up the sheer face of Breakneck Mountain, overlooking the Hudson River.

A will was found in Feigin's wallet and officials revealed a note at the bottom expressed Feigin's thanks to all his friends for what they had done for him, with the exception of N. Girard Bloch, his climbing companion.

After questioning, Bloch was allowed to return to his Brooklyn home on his own recognizance.

Feigin's body was buffeted against the side of the cliff by wind for three hours in plain view of hundreds, before it could be hauled up by State troopers.

The two youths had just begun the difficult climb down the cliff. Bloch said he went down 80 feet to a ledge and Feigin followed on a separate rope.

"At 60 feet he stopped," said Bloch. "The rope seemed to slip from under him and he apparently became entangled.

"The wind spun him around. He either became confused or was hurt. I think the rope got around his neck when it slipped from under his leg. The wind alone could not have done it."

Commons Cheers Chamberlain's Call For World Alliance Against Aggression

Special Cable to The Post.

London, April 3—Prime Minister Chamberlain, speaking before a House of Commons united on foreign policy as it has seldom been since the World War, today appealed to all countries of good will to join in his protective bloc of "peace powers" determined to prevent Reichsfuehrer Hitler from carrying out any intention he might have to dominate the world.

As on Friday, the insufficient space on the floor of the House of Commons was overflowing with members and the galleries were packed. United States Ambassador Kennedy was among the many heads of foreign diplomatic missions present.

The new policy of collective security was necessary, Chamberlain said, because the assurances which had been given by the German government to himself and to the world that it had no wish to "dominate other races" had now been "thrown to the winds."

Nazi Threat Is Theme

The phrase "world domination" provided the refrain which ran throughout the prime minister's remarks. He made it clear that this threat of domination as manifest in the Fuehrer's annexation last month of two Czecho-Slovak provinces, was the factor which had caused him to reverse his foreign policy and prepare to extend to the Baltic and the Black Sea Britain's pledge to take up arms in case of aggression.

The negotiations now in progress, Chamberlain asserted, "contain no threat to Germany so long as Germany will be a good neighbor." He declared there was no thought of encirclement of the Third Reich, if by encirclement an aggressive policy were implied.

Using terms much stronger than those he employed in his Birmingham speech, the prime minister said Hitler's aggressive tactics in March had "completely destroyed confidence," "profoundly shocked and alarmed public opinion throughout the world," and had "rightly or wrongly made every state which lies adjacent to Germany unhappy, anxious and uncertain about Germany's intentions."

Hopes for Rule of Reason

Another result, he explained, was that "this country has been united from end to end in the conviction that we must now make our position clear and unmistakable, whatever may be the results."

In a concluding passage, Chamberlain added:

"I trust that our action will prove to be the turning point—not toward war, which wins nothing, cures nothing, ends nothing—but toward a more wholesome peace era in which reason will take the place of force and threats will make way for cool and well-marshaled arguments."

Commenting on certain misunderstandings of his pledge to defend Polish independence, Chamberlain said he thought it was "clear and plain to all who run and read."

"Of course, a declaration of that importance is not concerned with some minor frontier incident," he said, "but it is concerned with the big events that might be behind these frontier incidents. The declaration that I made was that, if Poland were threatened, France and ourselves would immediately come to her aid."

While Chamberlain was speaking in the House, Col. Josef Beck, Po-

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

PSYCHING THE BIG ONES

A psychoanalyst might suspect that these Capital personages behave this way as adults because maybe these things happened to 'em as children:

Harlan Miller

HULL: As a boy he yearned to swap his air rifle and marbles for other boys' kites and stuffed owls. His parents sternly said no . . . So now he negotiates reciprocal trade treaties, and is fairly happy.

* * * *

MRS. ROOSEVELT: Her parents made her sit perfectly still with her hands folded in her lap for hours at a time, like a little lady. She obeyed bravely, but underneath she seethed. Now she is working off all that suppressed energy in every direction.

If you want to be like the First Lady, little girls, just sit quietly with your hands folded. Some day you'll take it out in travel.

* * * *

ECCLES: Though he was the son of a rich father, his spending money as a small boy was limited to 3 cents a week . . . Of this, he saved 2 cents . . . That way he got richer and richer . . . The revulsion set in when he became chairman of the Federal Reserve; now he believes in a strong spending policy.

"—now he yearns to deport"

THOMAS: This Jersey Congressman was frightened in a rowboat as a small boy; some bigger boys tried to push him off. Later he tried to conquer his fear of boats, but to no avail; his mother told him to stay away from 'em. Now he has sublimated his suppressed desire to be a sailor in a burning eagerness to deport people (pushing people off in boats) and to impeach Mrs. Perkins to get even with his mother.

* * * *

WALLACE: As a boy he was forbidden by his father (also a Secretary of Agriculture) to sow corn on the lawn . . . Later he planted corn surreptitiously in the eave troughs and behind the garage. This resulted in a sense of guilt and a split personality. He has tried with partial success to compensate for this (1) by breeding ultra-productive seed corn and (2) by controlling the planting of other farmers.

* * * *

MORGENTHAU: As a boy he was inveterately romantic, and wanted to devote his life to a search for buried pirate gold . . . This led indirectly to his career as a gentleman farmer near Squire Roosevelt; he always hoped to plow up some pirate doubloons. Frustrated, he became Secretary of the Treasury and began to bury great quantities of gold, with a mixed motivation, partly in the hope of digging it up later and partly to keep Squire Roosevelt from spending it.

* * * *

ARNOLD: In his childhood Thurman Arnold lived in a Wyoming community where one man owned all the cows as far as the eye could see. In young Arnold's mind this rankled; it was too many cows for one man, a monopoly, and none for the rest. Now the Assistant Attorney General keeps one cow (as a symbol) and ostensibly fights monopoly of everything; actually he is interested only in cows.

"—suppressed desire to fingerprint"

REYNOLDS: Prone as a boy to leave muddy hand and footprints on walls and ceiling, he was frequently punished for this. Now as a Senator he has introduced a bill to fingerprint people, an inversion of his suppressed desire to fingerprint himself. An inveterate traveler, his urge to deport people is merely a sublimation of his benevolent desire to make other people travel, too.

* * * *

FARLEY: Classic case of a lad whose sole ambition was to be a big league ballplayer. Frustrated, he spends his time persuading other local politicians to play ball.

* * * *

GARNER: A cowboy who never became expert with the lariat. Has adjusted himself satisfactorily by roping and wrangling Senators and putting his brand on 'em.

* * * *

ROOSEVELT: When he was a boy the President's aristocratic parents prevented him from playing with the underprivileged lads in the neighborhood . . . This augmented his interest in the lower one-third, left him strikingly disinterested in the boys of his own class superficially, though probably deeply devoted to them in his subconscious mind. Best chance for a readjustment would be to permit him to spend a fortnight in a forecastle, flophouse or sharecropper's shack.

"This is pure speculation, of course.

Senate Group Refuses WPA Increase, 8-2

Overton and McKellar Only Ones to Back $150,000,000 Total

An overwhelming subcommittee vote against granting $150,000,000 for emergency relief needs was followed in the Senate yesterday by private negotiations intended to secure easy passage of the $100,000,000 appropriation already approved by the House.

With 200,000 persons scheduled to be dropped from WPA rolls this week, the subcommittee handling relief appeared ready to give a favorable report today or tomorrow on the House bill, which would allot to the WPA for the remaining three months of the fiscal year a sum $50,000,000 less than the President repeatedly has requested.

In the only vote on the relief question taken yesterday, the subcommittee disapproved, 8 to 2, a motion of Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisana, to raise the House bill to $150,000,000, in accordance with the President's wishes. Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, sided with Overton, while Senators Adams, Glass, Hayden, Byrnes, Tydings and Russell (Democrats), and Townsend and Nye (Republicans), voted in the negative.

To Avoid Bitter Fight

While some members of the conservatively minded subcommittee would like to report out a bill giving the WPA even less than $100,000,000, it was learned yesterday that the House figure may receive nominal support of all committee Democrats in an effort to preserve party harmony.

The Administration is not pressing for $150,000,000, as there is little desire to repeat the bitter intra-party fight of last January, when Senator McKellar's effort to increase the WPA appropriation was defeated by one vote.

Republicans—as a party—are not expected to offer concerted opposition to $1000,000,000, if that sum is reported by the subcommittee. On the other hand, if economy advocates in the Appropriations Committee gain the upper hand and indorse a bill for less than $100,000,000, the Administration will oppose the reduction with all its strength.

Despite behind-the-scenes efforts to reach agreement on $100,000,000, some independent New Dealers in the Senate are certain to attempt to raise the appropriation on the floor. Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, already has announced that, "if no one else does it," he will introduce such an amendment.

$150,000,000 Might Win

Even without active Administration backing the move may succeed, for some Senators who voted against the $150,000,000 in January have said they will favor it now. Nevertheless, an important New Deal Senator who favors the higher appropriation told The Post yesterday that he expects $100,000,000 to be voted "because word has got around that the WPA doesn't really need the money."

Senator Pepper, who said last night he had a "very firm resolve," to try for $150,000,000, refused to answer when he was asked if any Administration leaders had requested him not to make the proposal. "No one has persuaded me not to," he commented.

In the Appropriations sub-committee meeting yesterday, the suggestion was made that $100,000,000 be approved with the proviso that a certain proportion be not used until after beginning of the new fiscal year on July 1.

"Economy" advocates on the subcommittee claim that from $38,000,000 to $55,000,000 is all that is really needed to preserve the WPA program intact for the next three months. If a "cushion" is necesary, they say, its use should be restricted to the new fiscal year.

Meanwhile, Chairman Taylor, of the House Apropriations Committee, called a meeting of his group for today to determine methods of procedure in carrying out the investigation of WPA ordered by the House a week ago.

The Post was informed on good authority that the task will be delegated to the deficiency sub-committee which handles all WPA appropriations. Taylor himself is chairman of this sub-committee but under normal circumstances Representative Woodrum, of Virginia, acts as chairman.

Woodrum, who led the fight for a $100,000,000 WPA appropriation in the House last week, thus will, in all probability, conduct the forthcoming investigation.

Impressions left on school children by last year's National Folk Festival lingered long after the final curtain fell, according to Miss Elizabeth Andrews, principal of Bancroft School.

ANDREWS

"Even after nearly a year, the experience keeps coming back to them, especially at certain points in their study of American history," Miss Andrews said yesterday. "Their comments prove that the festival made history a reality for them."

The Bancroft principal took 150 pupils to last year's performance and plans to take 300 this year. A special elementary school program will be held Thursday afternoon, April 27, at Constitution Hall. Like the five other matinee and evening performances, it is sponsored by the Washington Post Folk Festival Association.

Heads School Committee

Miss Andrews heads the school committee sponsoring the sixth annual National Folk Festival. Chairman for the elementary schools is Miss Katherine Scrivener of Langdon School, assisted by the Misses Margaret Pepper (E. V. Brown), Katherine Doonan (West), Marie Turner (Burroughs), Elizabeth Ramey (Edmonds-Maury), and Mrs. Myrtle Werner (Cranch-Tyler).

Miss Isabelle Foster of Paul School is chairman for the junior high schools. Her committee includes Miss Louise Veihmeyer (Deal), Miss Julie Kupfer (Eliot), Mrs. Elizabeth Draper (Gordon), Miss Margaret Gessford (Hine), Miss Ruth Jehle (Jefferson), Miss Helen Appler (Langley), Mrs. Myrtle Sutherlin (Macfarland), Mrs. Thelma McAdoo (Lowell), Miss Eliza-Beth Jamieson (Stuart) and Miss Florance Gregory (Taft).

High School Group

The high school committee, headed by Miss Louise Moore of Central, includes: Miss Grace King (Anacostia), Mrs. Naida Simmerman (Eastern), Miss Sue Brett McKinley), Miss Clara Burroughs (Roosevelt), Miss Clara Stutz (Western) and Miss Elizabeth Best (Wilson).

Others on the committee are Miss Margaret Streett, of Abbott Vocational School; Mrs. Etta Keirn, of Dennison, and Miss J. F. McPherson, of Lenox; Miss Augusta Kriener, of Wilson Teachers College; Miss Evaline Burgess, Miss Isabelle Foster, Miss Katherine Fowler, Mrs. Clara Mess and Mrs. Ethel Connor of the music division of the schools, and Miss Elizabeth Molster of the health and physical education department.

Free Canners From Pay Act, Tydings Urges

Radcliffe Joins Fight On Revision of Exemption Rules

By the Associated Press.

Members of Congress joined spokesmen of the fruit and vegetable industry yesterday in attacking proposals to revise and broaden regulations exempting from the fair labor standards act workers engaged in processing perishable and seasonable commodities.

They spoke at a hearing conducted by Elmer F. Andrews, wage-hour administrator, on exemptions suggested by Merle D. Vincent, chief of the WHA exemption section. Vincent presided at a hearing last January on complaints by the industry that the regulations were too narrow and restrictive.

Tydings, Radcliffe Attend

Vincent proposed that the administrator's definition of the area of production, under which workers engaged in processing fruits and vegetables are exempt, be revised to cover a broader geographical area.

He suggested that the exemption apply to processors in establishments located in open country or rural communities of less than 25,000 which obtain their products from farms within a radius of 50 miles, and perform the processing for the account of the grower.

Senators Tydings and Radcliffe, Maryland Democrats, and Representatives Pierce (Democrat), of Oregon; Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, and West (Democrat), of Texas, took part in today's discussion.

Bland argued that the administrator's action in defining the area of production for exemption purposes was "arbitrary assumption of power."

Would Favor Co-operatives

West said the revised regulations would not take care of the needs of citrus growers in the Lower Rio Valley and added that co-operatives would gain an advantage over small canners and small farmers.

Tydings and Radcliffe urged complete exemption for the canning industry.

Ivan G. McDaniel, Los Angeles, representing producers in Oregon, California and Arizona, asserted that Vincent's findings and proposals were not supported by evidence submitted at the January hearing.

Senator Barbour Urges Repeal of Ban On Interstate Shipping of Fight Films

By the Associated Press.

Senator Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, asked the Senate yesterday to repeal the law prohibiting interstate shipment of prizefight films.

BARBOUR

The Senator said the law, enacted in 1912, was the result of racial feeling against Jack Johnson, then the world's heavyweight champion. Barbour is a former amateur heavyweight champion.

"The present heavyweight champion, Joe Louis, is universally admired and the conditions that accompanied the ascension of Jack Johnson to the title did not accompany the ascension of Joe Louis," Barbour said.

Fred H. Brown (Democrat), New Hampshire, was confirmed unanimously by the Senate yesterday for the post of Comptroller General—a $10,000-a-year 15-year job.

Brown, once Governor of New Hampshire, was elected to the Senate in the Democratic sweep of 1932. He was defeated in the 1938 election by a Republican, Charles W. Tobey.

A Congressman's toothache has gained at least a temporary reprieve for nine worn-out Army mules scheduled to face a firing squad at Fort Dix, N. J., Saturday.

Representative Gavagan (Democrat), of New York, proposed to ask Congress to let the Army give the mules to humanitarian groups despite present regulations calling for their destruction. Because Gavagan is laid up with a toothache and unable to press for Congressional action, the War Department indicated yesterday it would defer the executions.

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, offered a bill to merge all Federal bank-examining activities under the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Through the measure, the FDIC would take over present examination activities of the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Reserve Board. Brown said consolidation would eliminate duplicating examinations and would reduce expenses.

Wendell E. Cable, secretary to Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, yesterday was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court.

A native of Raleigh, Ill., Mr. Cable graduated from National University Law School in Washington in 1923, and three years later began the practice of law in Peoria, Ill., and Chicago.

Illness prevented four New England Senators from attending to their official duties yesterday.

Senator Hale (Republican), of Maine, who underwent a minor abdominal operation last month, returned to Emergency Hospital over the week-end because of increased temperature, but aides said they expected he would be discharged in a few days.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, left for Florida Saturday to recuperate from a severe cold.

Senator Gibson (Republican), of Vermont, was on a West Indies cruise recuperating from a cold and Senator Tobey (Republican), New Hampshire, was reported suffering from grippe at his Temple, N. H., home.

House Passes Bill To 'Spare' Irish

The House unanimously passed a bill yesterday that should have been passed on St. Patrick's Day.

It's a bit of legislation with an Irish flavor; for its effect is to spare Irishmen the "embarrassment" of renouncing allegiance to King George VI when they become naturalized American citizens. The bill was sponsored by Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts.

Connally Drops Rider, Threat To Pay Tax Bill

Abandons Effort to Attack Increased Oil Tariff to Measure

An oil tariff threat to the Administration's reciprocal trade program was removed yesterday when Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, abandoned a salary tax bill rider opposed by the President.

Connally said he will not offer amendments for a 2-cent increase on imported fats and oils which the President had declared would "jeopardize" the trade program. Mr. Roosevelt threatened veto.

Offered as a rider to the President's bill to permit reciprocal taxation of Federal-State employe salaries, the amendment was defeated last week by the Senate Finance Committee. A fight immediately opened to insert the tax increase in the Senate.

Abandons Amendment

When the salary tax measure was called up yesterday, Connally was silent. Later the Texan told reporters he had abandoned the effort, still denying it would endanger Secretary Hull's trade program.

Another controversial amendment to the salary tax measure was withdrawn by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, as the bill moved toward passage. Clark had asked that exemptions be removed from Federal and State bonds, along with salary exemptions. The Missourian told the Senate the House Ways and Means Committee has agreed to consider the proposal. But he served notice he would again call it up in the Senate should the House fail to act.

Only one barrier lay in the path of the new salary tax legislation as the Senate recessed—an amendment by Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, subjecting the salaries of Federal judges to taxes.

Brown Debates Issue

The Supreme Court last week held the Federal Government has a right to tax salaries of Federal employes, and State governments may tax Federal employe income. Federal judges were presumed to be exempt, as the Constitution forbids diminuition of their salaries while in office. Brown, who is chairman of a special Senate tax committee, yesterday took issue with this constitutional construction, and declared taxation should not be construed as a diminishment of income. As opposition developed, Brown asked that debate go over until today.

Meantime the Supreme Court agreed to determine validity of legislation imposing a Federal income tax on a Federal judge. A Nebraska Federal court had held unconstitutional an attempt to tax $12,500 in salary received in 1936 by Joseph W. Woodbrough, Circuit Court of Appeals judge at Omaha. The Government appealed the decision and the Supreme Court yesterday agreed to take jurisdiction.

The Senate approved an amendment by Brown stipulating that Federal employes' income shall be immune to retroactive taxation by the States. A second provision empowers the Federal Government to tax retroactively the salaries of employes of any State that attempts to impose back taxes on Federal employes.

Sugar Bill Veto Planned, Say House Leaders

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

President Roosevelt will veto the Ellender sugar quota bill should Congress enact it, House Democratic leaders said they were informed yesterday.

The bill, passed last week by the Senate, now is before the House Agriculture Committee. It increases the continental sugar quota of 300,000 tons, which would curtail a corresponding quantity from Cuba and the Philippine Islands.

President Roosevelt's objections were reported to be on the ground of conflict with reciprocal trade agreement with Cuba and that Hawaii and Puerto Rico would be denied participation in the increase to be given domestic beet and cane sugar growers.

Chairman Marvin Jones of the House Agriculture Committee revealed there are no plans to give consideration to the measure.

Franco's Flag Hoisted Over Embassy Here

Juan Cardenas, Spain's Charge d'Affaires, Takes Over Offices

The Spanish Embassy today flaunts the red and gold flag of Nationalist Spain. Suave and assured Juan Francisco de Cardenas, interim charge d'affaires, arrived yesterday to take over the embassy.

Yesterday Cardenas raised the red and gold banner—upside down. He declined to correct its position for cameramen, insisting the flag, right side or wrong side up, sufficed to symbolize recognition of the Nationalist government here.

Cardenas, generally accredited with being Franco's American representative during the war, was appointed charge ad interim Monday, two days after Secretary Hull's dispatch announcing this country's willingness to establish diplomatic relations.

Hull announced yesterday that the American charge ad interim in Burgos would be C. Freeman Mathews, first secretary of the Paris Embassy.

Through his attorney, William S. Culbertson, of Washington, Cardenas secured an appointment for today with Secretary Hull to discuss problems arising from the death of republican Spain.

Chief of these, it was understood, is the suit of Bank of Spain stockholders against the Federal Reserve Bank and United States Treasury in the New York Federal Court to recover $10,500,000 credited to the Spanish republic's account for 25,000,000 ounces of silver.

Cardenas had been successively secretary, counselor and ambassador here until his transfer to Paris a few years ago.

Mathews, the new American charge, is 40 years old, a native of Baltimore and a specialist in Latin-American affairs. He was graduated from Princeton and studied abroad before entering the diplomatic service in 1923.

Social Security Clerks Despair, Witness Tells Ellender Inquiry

Corson Replies Only Two-Tenths of One Per Cent Have Expressed Grievance; Efficiency Rating Methods and Board of Review Assailed

The Ellender Senatorial Committee, investigating favoritism in the Federal service, heard two conflicting things about the personnel situation in the Social Security Board yesterday.

"At no time in 17 years have I seen so many people with a feeling of despair," said John A. Lucas, who entered the SSB in 1936 at $3,200, remaining in that bracket to date.

"You have heard cases involving 10 out of approximately 7,000 employes of the Bureau of Old-Age Insurance, or less than two-tenths of one per cent of the employes of the bureau," said John J. Corson, the bureau director.

Ellender recessed the SSB cases until next week. He will resume the hearing on other cases at 2 p. m. today.

J. D. Hayes, one-time assistant director, Bureau of Old-Age Insurance, now assistant solicitor, Veterans' Administration, said college experts were given preference in the SSB over civil service workers. This was denied by Robert M. Barnett, SSB personnel director.

Hayes said that he had wanted practical-experience people in the jobs, but the employing was done by the executive office. Asked by Ellender how the SSB got rid of people not wanted by the executives, Hayes said he thought it was by the "usual system, to abolish the job." He said that civil service did guarantee the jobs in the lower grades.

Lucas, a World War veteran, entered the Federal service in 1921 "hoping to make it a career." He had worked in the Agriculture and Commerce Departments and the NRA. His complaint yesterday was over his efficiency rating, and Corson agreed that a technical error was made and should be corrected, but added that the board shuold expect something more than clerical service for $3,200 a year—"and that's all we've been getting."

Grover A. Sheppard, $3,300 employe in the SSB Field Supervision Section, condemned the Board of Review, saying that employes who appealed there stood chance of losing their jobs. Ferdinand L. Compton rose from the audience to say he once appealed and his job was abolished. Corson requested Ellender to summons the chairman of the appeals board.

In his formal statement yesterday, Corson said the objectives of Ellender's hearings were of "real importance in the development of the civil service. . . . I fear, however, that much of the evidence presented has not proved helpful. Certainly it has not afforded an accurate picture of 'the administration and operation of the civil service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended,' within the Social Security Board. The evidence you have heard, however, probably does reflect the absence of 'discrimination' as practiced by appointing and supervisory officials."

O.E.S. Negotiating For Marshall Field Home in District

Negotiations for the purchase of the historic Marshall Field house, Sixteenth and Euclid streets northwest, by the Order of the Eastern Star, are nearing completion, it was learned yesterday. It was understood the order would erect a temple on the site.

Mrs. Marshall Field, widow of the Chicago department store king, lived in the house in the early 1920's.

On her death Mrs. Field left the mansion to her niece, Mrs. Catherine Beveridge, who with the late Senator Beveridge, lived in it for some time.

Admission Fee To District Bar Set at $25

Charge for Lawyers Of Other Jurisdictions Increased to $50

Chief Justice Wheat yesterday announced that the general term of District Court had ordered the examination fee for admission to the bar fixed at $25, with a fee of $15 for a second examination and $25 for any after that.

Attorneys from other jurisdictions who apply for admission here will be required to pay $50 hereafter, instead of $25 which has been charged up to now.

The court ordered that an applicant be allowed only three examinations as a matter "of right," and that a fourth examination be given only after a year's delay and submission of a statement to the admission committee showing diligent study.

Should the applicant fail a fourth time he would be allowed another trial only upon convincing evidence of further study. The justices ordered that the fifth examination be the last one allowed.

Some months ago the court ordered that beginning in 1944 applicants show two years of college study before beginning law.

Philadelphians Win Contract For Memorial

Cost of $2,159,300 May Be Increased by Marble Interior

The contract for construction of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial has been awarded to the John McShain Co. of Philadelphia, lowest bidder, the memorial commission announced yesterday through its chairman, Stuart G. Gibboney. The authorized contract totals $2,159,300.

The commission will soon announce another competition for a statue of Jefferson for the memorial's interior, it was learned.

The commission reserved the right to accept within 30 days an alternative providing marble for the building's interior at an added cost of $99,000.

Recently the Fine Arts Commission contended that funds were insufficient to provide interior marble. However, the cost of the superstructure, the statue and the foundation, now nearing completion at the Tidal Basin, apparently will fall within the $3,000,000 authorized by Congress.

Officials Here Plan Reception of King and Queen

Tentative plans for welcoming the King and Queen of England were drafted yesterday by District and Government officials.

The Royal couple will arrive at Union Station June 8. Officials pointed out that between Union Station and the White House, they would pass through four police jurisdictions. The route to the White House probably would be along Pennsylvania avenue.

$712,000 Verdict Won by Mill For Strike Loss testified nonstriking workers were manhandled by the sitdowners.

Several witnesses told of bricks being thrown through windows of the plant and the wrecking of machinery and office furniture.

Leader admitted on the witness stand he called the strike, but insisted it was not a sit-down.

The jurors deliberated more than five hours. Their verdict exonerated other officers of the union named in the suit. These were Joseph Burge, vice president; Ulysses Brown, secretary, and Harry Ohmeig, treasurer.

Simons said that if the verdict finally is sustained the union and Leader "will not shirk their responsibility."

He explained that since Leader had been named responsible for the damage as an officer of the union and not as an individual any financial judgment against Leader probably would be assessed against the union treasury.

Simons said that "If the verdict stands, it means that any time there is a strike the employer can restrain the strikers by invoking the Sherman act.

"This was not a sit-down strike, but I think the jury was influenced by the recent Supreme Court decision outlawing sit-downs."

The 13-day trial recalled two other famous cases in which employers were awarded damages in suits against unions—the Danbury hatters' and the Coronado coal cases.

The hat case resulted from a strike called by the hatters' union in 1902 against the factory of Dierich Eduard Lowe in Danbury, Conn. The union started a Nation-wide boycott. Lowe replied with suits against each of 186 strikers and another against the union. He won every suit. The union lost three appeals to the United States Supreme Court and became insolvent.

In the other case, the Coronado Coal Co., of Arkansas, sued the United Mine Workers of America in 1922 for $2,222,000. After 13 years' litigation, the union settled for $27,500. Charles Evans Hughes, now Chief Justice of the United States, represented the Mine Workers in this case.

In a more recent case, Judge Fred L. Wham, of United States District Court, at East St. Louis, Ill., ruled last January that the Progressive Miners of America (A. F. of L.) must pay the United Electrical Coal Co. $117,000. The company hasd asked $400,000 against the union and 66 members after picketing caused a mine shutdown near Freeburg, Ill.

The judge held there had been an "unlawful conspiracy." The union settled out of court.

SEC Studies Credit Needs of Small Business

around Fall River, Mass.; the region around Omaha, the Rocky Mountain area and the centers of concentrated business activity at Detroit and Toledo, Houston and Dallas, and Seattle and Portland. In addition, similar surveys will be conducted by the SEC's nine regional offices.

"The South," Frank said, "has never had enough capital to develop its resources. It has been forced to borrow from outside areas. In fact, the South has never been permitted to recover from the Civil War. The North has had its foot on its ever since 1865."

The Fall River area is being studied because it is representative of an older industrialized section which has suffered in competition with other sections.

Capital Needs Studied

The Omaha region is expected to furnish a picture of small business credit problems under "dust bowl" conditions. The effect of distance from large centers of capital will be investigated in the Rocky Mountain region.

An effort will be made to obtain detailed estimates of the needs of small business for capital financing, the various sources of capital, the channels through which financing may be obtained and the obstacles which stand in the way.

Frank explained the investigation wuold involve both bank loan and equity financing needs. He emphasized that "nobody is to blame for the difficulties encountered by small business in obtaining long-term financing." In the case of banks, he pointed out, risk may be a deterrent.

One of the questions to be considered, he said, will be the need for fostering small business, from the standpoint of both economic and cultural advantages.

Frank said that, although the Western frontier had disappeared, there exist "internal frontiers," such as the South. If these frontiers could be developed economically, he declared, the resultant prosperity for the Nation would make that which followed the development of the West "appear poverty-stricken."

Hopkins, in his letter to Lea, declared that, because of limited facilities for research, the mortality rate of small business "has been exceedingly high." He inclosed a suggest draft of legislation to provide up-to-date facilities.

"The bill," he said, "is intended to develop a business research station in every State in the Union."

Senate Passes Cotton Bill; West Also Seeks Subsidies

Farm

Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation.

Secretary Wallace, preparing to launch through the Surplus Commodities Corporation a new program of surplus disposals to the needy, is understood to be interested in the strictly domestic phase of the "unified" plan.

The Administration is expected to oppose any wide use of export subsidies beyond the present limited export aid for wheat and export subsidies proposed by the President for cotton.

Tentative Figures

Figures tentatively discussed yesterday would make $35,000,000 of the special customs receipts fund available for surplus butter; $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 for lard; $10,000,000 for citrus fruits; $25,000,000 for wheat and $50,000,000 to $80,000,000 for cotton.

Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, chairman of the Midwestern bloc, declined to discuss details of the counter program pending another meeting of the group tomorrow. Yesterday he named Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, to a special sub-committee directing the work of the bloc.

In an effort to agree with Southern Senators on a composite program aiding all surplus producers, Lucas, Clark and LaFollette yesterday conferred with Senators Byrnes, of South Carolina; Bankhead, of Alabama and Russell, of Georgia, (Democrats). Wallace attended the conference.

For Broad-Scale Policy

Lucas said both groups were in agreement on "the urgent need for some sort of broad-scale national farm policy" but said there was little discussion of details. He said the three Southern Senators asked time to confer with their colleagues.

A pivot of the proposed program would be farm parity payments. Although $212,000,000 is being currently paid to producers of corn, cotton, wheat, rice and tobacco, on the basis of 1909-1914 farm purchasing power, the House defeated a proposal to appropriate $250,000,000 more for that purpose next year. Present plans call for scaling down this amount and offering it as an amendment to either the farm appropriation bill or the regular relief bill in the Senate. To aid producers of commodities not provided for under parity payments, a sharp increase would be asked in the $90,000,000 now allotted from customs receipts for promoting surplus sales.

Westerners Opposed

Passage of the Bankhead bill, authorizing farm repossession of part of the 11,250,000-bale stock of loan cotton, came over opposition of the Western bloc, which seeks to hold up the cotton program until agreement can be reached on a general farm plan.

The Bankhead bill permits farmers to buy back their loan cotton, up to 2,000,000 bales, on condition that they reduce their next crop by an equivalent amount. The Government would lose 3 or 4 cents a pound on the transaction, but loan stocks would be cut down and acreage decreased. The price farmers would pay to repossess the cotton was raised from 3 to 5 cents on motion of Senate Minority Leader McNary.

The second half of the cotton program to be called up today by Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, would provide direct 3-cent-a-pound subsidies to cotton farmers who promised not to seek additional loans. Originally the Bankhead measure also was incorporated in Smith's bill, but the two were separated after the President denounced the Smith plan as too costly. Both are in conflict with the President's alternative proposal to subsidize export of Government loan stocks at an annual cost of about $80,000,000.

The Rev. Samuel L. Dumville performed the ceremony at 9 p. m. March 27. Witnesses were Mrs. John Durant, a friend of the bride; John Abbot, of Lynchburg, and William E. Sandidge, county clerk.

The bride's name was given as Elizabeth Reynolds and her age as 32. The groom gave his age as 28.

Fidelity Books Back Rhodes, Says Witness

Treasurer Defends President Accused Of False Oath

Fred B. Rhodes, former president of the Fidelity Building and Loan Association, yesterday began his defense against charges of swearing to a false statement of the association's condition, after Justice Adkins refused to order the jury to acquit him.

Two juries disagreed on forgery charges against Rhodes, after the Fidelity closed with a $700,000 loss.

Mrs. Ruth S. Horner, former Fidelity treasurer, testifying yesterday for the defense, said the Fidelity's books were in balance in 1935 at the time Rhodes swore to the statement. The Government claims the statement misrepresented the association's condition by $77,000, turning a deficit into an apparent surplus.

Mrs. Horner denied anything was done in the association's offices to prepare a false report. She explained that what was called "the Rhodes account," reflected expenses of various sorts, "shortages in branches" and other items which could not be shown as assets.

338,000 Idle Coal Miners Await Operators' Reply

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 3—Soft coal miners in eight States faced tonight at least one more idle day as operators formulated a reply to labor's proposal that a closed shop be formally writen into a new contract.

Neither the operators nor the United Mine Workers of America (CIO) offered an opinion as to when they might agree upon a new wage and hour contract and end the general shutdown which began today.

Approximately 338,000 miners in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee, Maryland, and Michigan did not report to work, union officials said.

Frazier Charges Douglas 'Reversal'

By the Associated Press.

Senator Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota, contended yesterday that William O. Douglas had performed a "sudden about face" in his attitude toward the New York Stock Exchange.

During Senate consideration of Douglas' Supreme Court nomination, Frazier said the Securities Commission chairman had "praised" the exchange for 10 months, but denounced the exchange's suggestions for changes in the securities act, "after his friends had been pushing his name for the Supreme Court for several weeks."

He Eats Live Snake, Smacksk Lips, Claims Title

Fayetteville, Ark., April 3 (U.P.).—John Goff, 20, sophomore at the University of Arkansas, today bit the head off a live 13-inch king snake and ate the reptile.

When Goff had finished this unusual appetizer, he ate a raw beef steak, smacked his lips and said:

"That's my bid for the intercollegiate reptile-eating championship. The Deep South will take no back seat to goldfish eaters with Harvard accents."

The king snake is not poisonous.

Mrs. Stinson Gave Fortune But Resented Tips, Court Told

gle meal instead of making one tip at the end of their stay.

Also, according to Miss Shoemaker, Mrs. Crounse was a woman who wept easily. "She could even read one of her own poems and weep," the nurse said.

Laughed, Cried Easily

Justice Luhring asked: "Well, who is right about this visit to the convent? We have been told that she was sad and weeping there, and Mr. Stinson said she seewed in a good humor."

"They both are right, your honor. I was there. Mrs. Crounse can laugh as easily as she cries. She is just off and on."

Miss Shoemaker, who is accused with Stinson of keeping Mrs. Crounse drugged until after the marriage, declared yesterday her mistress was in much better health during the summer of 1937—while the romance was in bloom—than during 1936, and "did not take nearly so much sedatives."

She described the doses of medicines given Mrs. Crounse, and asserted she always followed the doctors' orders "religiously." Asserting that she loved her mistress dearly, she said she had seen her through many storms periods and never took her "tantrums" to seriously. She described one of the times when "Mrs. Crounse got mad at Mr. Crounse and left home, but came back from the Union Station when he said he'd send detectives after her."

Angry at Nurse

"She got terribly mad at me when she went to a sanatorium and did not like it there. When she returned she said: 'Shoesy, you get right out of this house. I never want to see you again. You helped send me to that bughouse,'" Miss Shoemaker said. "She got over this when Mr. Stinson said he would have to leave too if I did—because they could not stay in the house alone."

The nurse denied she had wanted to go to Atlantic City with Stinson while Mrs. Crounse was at the sanitorium. "Mrs. Crounse insisted that I go because she did not want Mr. Stinson to be out with the car alone for fear he would spend too much money," she said. "I don't like Atlantic City, and never have."

Mrs. Stinson appeared to enjoy the drama of yesterday's testimony. She smiled frequently and whispered to her attorneys.

Widow Feared Gossip

Miss Shoemaker declared she was the cause of Stinson's returning to Chester, Nova Scotia, after he had left during a quarrel. "Mrs. Crounse wanted to go right down to Maine after he sent her a telegram, but I told her I wouldn't run after any man, to let him come back there.

"She said it would be less expensive to just go on down, rather than paying his way back; but I told her it would be less expensive in the long run. After Mr. Stinson came back and the wedding plans began, we surely were happy. Anything for peace. I remember saying, 'I hope to goodness this goes through and we can rest once more.'"

Although Mrs. Crounse had introduced Stinson to Chester as a "distant cousin of Mr. Crounse," to keep down talk, she found it hard "to keep from making scenes in public, she was so jealous about the little artists down at Peggys Cove," Miss Shoemaker said.

"We motored a lot, and always bought antiques," Miss Shoemaker said. "Both bought right and left."

"Where in the world did they put all those antiques?" Justice Luring asked.

JESSICA SHOEMAKER

Knowing Mrs. Crounse's "weakness for giving things and then taking them back," Miss Shoemaker declared, she urged her against giving "so much money to Mr. Stinson and against making out that trust fund for him." At one time, she said, she got a fortune teller to call her up and ask her to be very sure she wished to make such a settlement.

"I knew she had been sorry before when she'd given things away, and I thought she might be again."

As the trial entered its fourth week, courtroom seats were at a premium. Many women spectators brought their lunch. Justice Luhring said night sessions might be necessary to get the testimony completed this week.

TVA Cleared By Majority In Inquiry

Morgan's Charges of Dishonesty Refuted; Personnel 'Able'

By the Associated Press.

A majority of the Joint Congressional Committee which investigated TVA exonerated that agency of charges of maladministration and inefficiency yesterday, while three Republican members of the committee protested such a finding.

Reporting to Congress, the majority asserted:

Rates for TVA power "provide a legitimate, honest yardstick" for comparison with rates charged by private utilities.

Charges of dishonesty preferred by Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, former TVA chairman deposed last year by President Roosevelt, were "without foundation."

TVA's "personnel is able, honest and efficient."

Acquisition of land by TVA has been efficiently and honestly managed."

Criticism directed at TVA spending by the office of the Comptroller General has been largely "baseless."

The Comptroller General's audit of TVA should be discontinued and a private auditing firm, selected by Congress, should go over the books annually, as is done in the case of the RFC.

The minority report said that:

The TVA "yardstick" is "not only meaningless, but is misleading, deceptive, unfair and dishonest as a measure of the fairness of the rates of privately-owned utilities not enjoying subsidies and advantages of which TVA may avail itself."

TVA should be subjected to a "sweeping reorganization."

TVA is guilty of "waste and inefficiency" and has been "arbitrary, dictatorial and unbusinesslike."

TVA has "discriminated" against union labor and against Negro employes.

The investigation should also have included an inquiry into the reasons for the volume of trading in private utility stocks and their increased prices during the period when TVA was negotiating for purchase of companies issuing securities in question.

Signers of the majority report were Senators Donahey (Democrat), Ohio, chairman; Mead (Democrat), New York; Schwartz (Democrat), Wyoming, and Frazier (Republican), North Dakota, and Representatives Thomason (Democrat), Texas, and Barden (Democrat), North Carolina. The minority report was signed by Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, and Representatives Jenkins (Republican), Ohio, and Wolverton (Republican), New Jersey.

House Group Votes to Extend President's Devaluation Right

Coinage Committee Approves Bill, 9-6; Republicans Plan Floor Fight; Stabilization Fund Also Sustained

By Cecil B. Dickson.

By International News Service.

By a vote of 9 to 6, the House Coinage Committee yesterday favorably reported the Administration Bill to continue for two years President Roosevelt's broad power to devalue the dollar.

The measure also continues until June 30, 1941, the $2,000,000,000 currency stabilization fund, and the President's authority to coin silver in unlimited amounts and to pay a subsidy to domestic silver producers.

The vote was along strict party lines, but three Democrats present failed to signify approval. Republicans announced they would file a minority report and would oppose any effort of Democrats to apply a "gag" rule in consideration of the measure when it is brought to the floor.

Representative Anderson (Republican) of Minnesota declared: "When the facts are presented to the House, we believe that it will refuse to approve the continuation of the President's authority to further devalue the dollar."

A Senate banking sub-committee has suspended hearings on the proposal. Senator Glass (Democrat) of Virginia, chairman of the subgroup, voiced opposition to continuing the dollar devaluation authority. He declared it was "inflationary" and "unnecessary."

The Federal Reserve Board disclosed, meanwhile, that foreign governments and their central banks were the owners of most of the foreign money and gold transferred to the United States during the latest European crisis.

The board's monthly bulletin said:

"Between the first of February and the middle of March, gold under earmark for foreign account in the United States increased by $111,000,000 and the deposits of foreign central banks at the Federal Reserve Banks increased by $83,000,000.

"This compares with a decrease of about $19,000,000 from the middle of December to the first of February."

Police, Firemen Face Rule Barring Gambling in D.C.

Corporation Counsel Seal yesterday submitted to the Commissioners a regulation which would bar Washington policemen and firemen from gambling anywhere inside the District line.

The regulation, prepared for inclusion in the police and fire manual, was recommended by Maj. Brown, superintendent of police, and later drafted by the corporation counsel at the request of the Commissioners.

Officials said the regulation would not bar firemen from their traditional pinochle games.

Justice Groner Rebukes FCC In Reversing Two Decisions

Chief Justice Groner rebuked the Federal Communications Commission yesterday in two Court of Appeals opinions which sharply reminded the administrative agency that it must follow the law just as courts do.

Two license applications were sent back for rehearing.

Applicants upheld by the Court were the Pottsville Broadcasting Corp., a Maryland company which seeks to operate at Pottsville, Pa., and Paul R. Heitmeyer, who wished to establish a radio station at Cheyenne, Wyo.

Court Reversed Order

The Pottsville firm had asked for a license in 1936. An FCC examiner recommended that it be granted. Later the FCC heard the case, along with the claim of a second applicant for the same license.

The FCC said the Pottsville company's financial ability had not been shown and that the chief stockholder did not live at Pottsville, in denying the application.

The Court of Appeals reversed the FCC, saying the complaining applicant was financially stable and that the FCC had followed no fixed rule or policy about the residence of stockholders. The FCC ordered the Pottsville company to start all over again, competing for its license with a third applicant.

FCC "Discretion" Hit

This was denounced as indicating "a definite intention to disregard the mandate" of the Court of Appeals. Chief Justice Groner held, saying:

"We cannot consent to the view that either the right to grant or the right to revoke is subject to the uncontrolled discretion" of the commission. The court ruling, in effect, was declared to be an order to grant the license.

The Heitmeyer case presented a similar question.

Slovaks Give Hungary 386 Square Miles

Protocol to Be Signed Today Fixes Border At Strategic Line

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, April 3.—Hungarian and Slovak negotiating commissions fixed a new Ruthenian-Slovak frontier in detail tonight. A protocol between Slovakia and Hungary will be signed tomorrow.

The agreement gives Hungary, which annexed the old Czech province of Ruthenia (Carpatho-Ukraine), title to almost all Slovak territory Hungarian troops occupied in frontier warfare March 23-25.

Hungary gains 386 square miles of territory and 45,000 new citizens. The territory includes 40 villages, two of them health resorts.

Of greater importance is the fact the land ceded includes mountain ledges which form a natural defensive frontier for the Ung Valley, through which run the main rail and highway connections between Hungary and Poland.

The strip is on the western frontier of Ruthenia, 36 miles long and 12 miles wide. It increases length of the Hungarian-Polish frontier by 15 miles.

This latest gain, the third since last fall, gives Hungary a total area of 46,000 square miles and a population of 10,335,000.

Despite the gains, Hungary remains less important than before the World War. Then she was an integral kingdom within the Austro-Hungarian empire, with 25,000,000 population and an area of 125,000 square miles.

Hungarian revisionists make it clear they still are far from satisfied. They want most of what is left of Slovakia and expect to get it, for they contend Slovakia is the natural economic adjunct of Hungary.

Revisionists also hope eventually to regain Transylvania from Rumania, although they are reluctant to do so at the price of making Hungary a state dominated by Germany.

Following a cabinet meeting today political circles indicated that, after final passage of the anti-Jewish laws, the government might call a general election, the first in four years.

Officials said that, despite admitted designs on Transylvania, Hungary has "no aggressive intentions" toward that country, but instead hopes its claims will be adjusted peaceably. They said they, therefore, looked with equanimity at Britain's implied guarantee to Rumania against aggression.

Reich Charges Britain With Inciting War

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 3.—Nazi Germany's spokesmen struck back quickly today at Prime Minister Chamberlain's promise to back up the independence of "all states" threatened by domineering force, with a charge that Britain was laying the groundwork for a new war which she would run at the expense of others.

"The self-defense is on our side," said one spokesman in reply to the British premier's statement that his policy was one of defense.

The spokesman explained that in his Wilhelmshaven speech Saturday Reichsfuehrer Hitler refrained from starting a campaign for a preventive war, but warned that attempts to mix in Germany's spheres of influence would meet with resistance.

Deutscher Dienst, a special service of DNB, German official news agency, said Hitler's speech "apparently was not correctly understood by the British government.

"We must once more emphasize that the Reich does not have any intention of waiting until the encirclement net has become closed and untearable," it asserted.

Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, semiofficial mouthpiece of the foreign office, said Germany would not be "indifferent or passive" to any aggressive tendencies on the part of European western democracies.

The publication charged that the efforts of the democracies were aimed at "bringing about dangerous dissension among the nations of Europe in the manner of their prewar policy, and then again under the conception of 'collective security.'"

"The only difference is that—in contrast to the Germany of League of Nations time—there stands today a Germany which, facing aggressive tendencies, would not be indifferent or passive."

The Reich, Korrespondenz asserted, is "entirely in a position to ascertain what rights are due it in the space in which it is now placed, and what obligations grow out of this responsibility.

"It has the pleasure of knowing that co-operation, which it has pledged in the future, is not only profitable for all participants, but is also desired by them."

Foreign office quarters earlier had expressed a conviction Chamberlain would get nowhere with his "halt Hitler" policy.

They said they had reason to believe that Poland, in the final analysis, would not respond to Britain's overtures at the expense of Polish friendship with Germany.

As for Rumania, they indicated a belief that Britain had come in too late—after the German-Rumanian trade treaty had been signed.

"Our relations with Rumania never were better," a spokesman said.

Officials studied Chamberlain's speech and watched closely the movements of Polish Foreign Minister Beck in London. It was taken for granted that Hitler was given a full report on the British House of Commons session.

Text of Chamberlain's Address to Commons

By the Associated Press.

London, April 3.—Following is the text of Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement today to the House of Commons.

After opening his speech with an expression of regret at the absence of Clement R. Attlee, leader of the Labor opposition in the House of Commons, and of hope he soon would be restored to health, Chamberlain said:

Mr. Greenwood (Arthur Greenwood, deputy leader of the opposition) promised on Friday that the debate to take place today should be carried on on a high level. So far as he was concerned he has amply fulfilled that promise. Feeling as I think he does that this is an occasion when we had rather stress the points on which we agree than those on which we may differ, I shall, while noting his reserve as to the leonine character of those who sit around him, not attempt to go back to any matter of difference but rather address myself to the situation that is before us.

When Lord Cranborne suggested on Friday that it might be a good thing if this debate were to be postponed for a time I confess that my first thought was rather to agree with him, not because I anticipated that any harm would be done by the debate but because I realized that nothing was likely to occur over the week-end which would enable me to give the house any new information.

"An Insurance Cover Note"

While Mr. Greenwood can very rightly and properly put forward his ideas as to the manner in which matters should be developed he, I know, recognizes that it is not so easy for me who am just about to take part in conversations to say in public what exactly are the lines on which we wish to go.

But if, as I hope may be the case, the result of this debate is to show that fundamentally and generally this house is unanimous in its approval of the declaration which I made on Friday and is united and determined to take whatever measures may be necessary to make that declaration effective, this debate may well serve a very useful purpose.

The declaration which I made on Friday has been described in a phrase so apt that it has been widely taken up—as a cover note issued in advance of a complete insurance policy.

I think I did myself emphasize this transitional or temporary character and that description of a cover note is not at all a bad one so far as it goes but where I think it is altogether incomplete is that whilst, of course, the issue of a cover note does not imply that it is to be followed by something more substantial it is the nature of the complete insurance policy which is such a tremendous departure from anything which this country has undertaken hitherto.

A New Point in Policy

It does really constitute a new—I was going to say epoch—but a new point in our foreign policy. The commitments of this country, whether actual or potential, were stated some time ago by my right honorable friend, Mr. Eden (Anthony Eden, former foreign secretary) in a passage which is famous, it was so carefully expressed. The commitments which he laid down in that passage in a speech he made in the country not long ago did not suggest that we should add to them something affecting a country in the eastern part of Europe.

If that had been suggested it would no doubt have obtained some limited amount of support but it certainly would not have commanded the approval of the great majority of the country. Indeed, to have departed from our traditional ideas in this respect so far as I did on behalf of the government on Friday constitutes a portent in British policy so momentous that I think it is safe to say it will have a chapter to itself when the history books come to be written.

Mr. Greenwood alluded just now to a misunderstanding of the meaning of the declaration. I confess that I was myself surprised that there could be any misunderstanding of the meaning of the declaration. I confess that I was myself surprised that there could be any misunderstanding of that statement. I thought it was clear and plain to all who run or read.

Of course, a declaration of that importance is not concerned with some minor little frontier incidents. It is concerned with the big things that may lie behind even a frontier incident and the independence of the state of Poland if it should be threatened, and if it were threatened I have no doubt that the Polish people would resist any attempt upon it.

Then the declaration I made means that France and Britain would immediately come to her assistance.

Mr. Greenwood quoted a passage from a speech of mine which I made very recently but perhaps I may be permitted to recall to the House that as long ago as last September I, myself, gave a warning of the possibility of such a departure as we are now contemplating.

On that Tuesday—the twenty-seventh I think it was of September—at a moment when it hardly seemed possible to cherish any longer the hope that peace might be preserved, it was my duty to broadcast a message and I would like if I may to recall to the House one or two sentences which I spoke then.

"A Man of Peace"

I am myself, I said, a man of peace to the depth of my soul. Armed conflict between nations is a nightmare to me but if I were convinced that any nation had made up its mind to dominate the world by fear of its force, I should feel that it must be resisted. Under such a domination, life for people who believed in liberty would not be worth living.

At that time I did not feel that the events that were taking place in connection with Czecho-Slovakia necessarily involved such an assumption as that. My opinion at that time was, as it is now, that war as it is waged in these days is such a frightful thing that I could not ask the country to accept new commitments which involved us in war unless some really vital principle, like that which I have just described, were to be at stake.

A little later, at the end of the year, members will recall that the President of the United States, in a New Year's message, dwelt upon the same talk, and at the end of that month, alluding to that New Year's message, I said that a challenge of that kind, a demand to dominate one by one of the other nations, might give us the only challenge that could endanger the peace of the world, and if it were to be made, I felt, like President Roosevelt, that it must be resisted.

Cites September Attribute

There were many at that time—there were some in September—who believed that the first steps had been taken toward making that challenge. At that time, it was possible to quote to those who held that view the assurance that had been given to me, and not to me only, but to the world, that the German government had no wish to dominate other races, but that all they wanted was to assimilate Germans living in adjacent territories within their own country.

We were told that when that was done it would be the end and that there were to be no further territorial ambitions. Those assurances have now been thrown to the winds absolutely. That has completely destroyed confidence and has forced the British government to make this great departure of which I gave the first intimation last week.

We are now told that there are other reasons for recent events in Czecho-Slovakia—histroical associations, the fear of attack. They may all be excellent reasons but they do not accord with the assurances that were given before. It was inevitable they should raise doubts as to whether other reasons might not be found for further expansion. I am not asserting that today this challenge has been made.

No official statement that I know of has even formulated such an ambition although there has been plenty of unofficial talk. But the effect of these recent events has penetrated far beyond the limits of the countries concerned, probably far further than was anticipated by those who brought them about.

It is no exaggeration to say that public opinion throughout the whole world has been profoundly shocked and alarmed. This country has been united from end to end in the conviction that we must now make our position clear and unmistakable whatever may be the result.

No one can regret more than I do the necessity to have to speak such words as these. I am no more a man of war today than I was in September.

I have no intention, no desire to treat the great German people otherwise than as I would have our own people treated. I was looking forward with strong hopes to the result of those trade discussions which had already begun in Germany, which might have benefited both our countries and many other countries besides, but confidence has been shaken and is not easily repaired.

Unhappy Neighbors

If this policy were the policy of the German government it is quite clear that Poland would not be the only country that would be endangered and the policy which has led us to give this assurance to Poland could not be satisfied or carried out if we were to confine ourselves to a single case. These recent happenings have, rightly or wrongly, made every state which lies adjacent to Germany unhappy, anxious and uncertain about Germany's future intention.

If that is all a misunderstanding, if the German government have never had any such thought, so much the better. In that case, any agreement which may be made to safeguard the independence of these countries would never be called upon to come into operation and Europe may then gradually simmer down into state of quietude when their existence might even be forgotten.

But let me emphasize again that whatever the outcome of the decisions which are now taking place between his majesty's government and other countries, they contain no threat to Germany so long as Germany will be a good neighbor.

Sets Differences Aside

I was glad to hear what Mr. Greenwood said about encirclement. It is fantastic to suggest that a policy which is a policy of self-defense can be described as encirclement, if by that term is meant encirclement for the purpose of aggressive action.

I do not wish today to attempt to specify what governments we may now or in the near future find it desirable to consult on the situation but I would make no allusion to the Soviet Union because I quite appreciate that the Soviet Union is always in the thoughts of members opposite and that they are still a little suspicious as to whether so-called ideological differences may not be dividing us in what otherwise it would be in the interests of both to do.

I do not pretend for one moment that ideological differences do not exist. They remain unchanged but, as I said on Friday, our point is that whatever may be those ideological differences they do not really count in a question of this kind.

What we are concerned with is to preserve our independence. When I say our independence, I do not mean this country only. I mean the independence of all states which may be threatened by aggression in pursuit of such a policy as I have described.

Welcome Any Co-operation

We therefore welcome the co-operation of any country, whatever may be its internal system of government, not in aggression, but in resistance to aggression. I believe that this nation is now united, not only in approval of what we have said, but in approval of the aim and purpose which lie behind it.

I believe that the whole empire shares in that approval. Members of the British empire beyond the seas have hitherto watched our efforts for peace with the fervent hope they might be successful.

All of them have had a growing consciousness that we cannot live forever in an atmopshere of surprise and alarm from which Europe has suffered in recent months.

The common business of life cannot be carried on in a state of uncertainty. As far as it has been possible for his majesty's government to help to restore confidence by plain words we have done our part, and in doing so I am certain we have expressed the will of this people.

I trust that our action, begun but not concluded, will prove to be a turning point, not towards war which wins nothing, cures nothing and ends nothing, but towards some more wholesome era when reason will take the place of force and when threats will make way for cool and well-marshaled argument.

lish foreign minister, arrived at Victoria Station, where he was met by Viscount Halifax, British foreign secretary. Tomorrow morning the Polish statesman and British leaders will go into conference on the details of the new antiaggression coalition, the first major step in the formation of which was Chamberlain's interim guaranty to Warsaw.

The intention is to turn this one-way pledge into a mutual-aid arrangement, undoubtedly with full military implications. There will also be discussions on a possible British loan to Poland, intended to afford her means of strengthening her defenses.

Rumania Moving Cautiously

Beck is expected to be able to throw much light on the position of Rumania, which, it is now known, has been invited by London and Paris to participate in the coalition. Contrary to expectations, Chamberlain failed today to make direct mention of Rumania, a fact which is attributed to the difficult position in which this Balkan power finds itself.

Bucharest is understood to be insisting that Poland—which has good relations with Hungary—should guarantee Rumania against attack, not only from Germany, but from Hungary as well. It is also thought she wants full assurance of support from the other members of the Balkan entente against possible aggression from the Bulgarian quarter. The view is general that eventually Rumania will be brought into Chamberlain's peace alliance, but because of factors such as those mentioned, there may be some delay.

One of the most significant sidelights on the Britain's new policy is that through it Chamberlain has not only disarmed the Liberal and Labor opposition but has, in effect, brought a number of the conservative rebels, such as Anthony Eden, Alfred Duff Cooper and Winston Churchill back into the field. Both Churchill and Eden manifested their wholehearted support of the government in their speches today.

U. S. S. R. Considered

In his speech Chamberlain gave assurance once again that Soviet Russia was being given full consideration. In the view of the government, he said, the ideological differences which separate Britain and the U. S. S. R. "do not count in questions of this kind."

"What we are concerned with is to preserve our independence and when I say 'our' I do not mean the independence of this country only. I mean the independence of all states which may be threatened by aggression. Therefore, we welcome the co-operation of any country, whatever may be its internal system of government—not in aggression, but in resistance to aggression."

The irrepressible David Lloyd George was unconvinced, however, and though he enthusiastically hailed the new policy he warned the government that, in case of a conflict, the situation would be serious unless Soviet Russia had been brought into full military collaboration.

Unless the potential aid of the U. S. S. R. was secured immediately, the commitment to Poland, he insisted, would prove "a frightful gamble," adding: "If we go in without Russia, we are walking into a trap."

Americanism No. 1 Requisite For Nation's Budding Envoys

Foreign Service Men Shouldn't Take Selves Too Seriously, Aide Says

By Christine Sadler

If the State Department had to single out the most desirable quality of an American diplomatist, it would select "Americanism," one believes after visiting the Foreign Service Officers' Training School and talking with Miss Cornelia Bassel.

"We are constantly getting letters from mothers who know their sons should be in the foreign service, just because they were born and brought up in Europe and can speak several languages. But, you see, we don't want expatriates.

"Knowledge of languages is an advantage, but what is essential is that they know the United States," she said yesterday.

For the last decade, Miss Bassel—an assistant to the director of the school—has seen dozens of Uncle Sam's newly appointed officers return from their probationary assignments to undergo intensive training in the classroom.

Nesse Has All Qualities

She frankly confesses she never has seen a prospective foreign service officer who possessed all the qualities Harold Nicolson listed in his recent book "Diplomacy" as ideal for the diplomatist. And she doesn't expect to.

Nicolson called for truth, accuracy, calm, patience, good temper, modesty, loyalty, intelligence, knowledge, discernment, prudence, hospitality, charm, industry, courage and tact. Miss Bassel says only:

"If they know how to learn, and do not take themselves too seriously, they will be successful."

The 17 young men now in the training school, whose average age is approximately 26 years, will get their permanent assignments next month. Miss Bassel has urged them not to ask for too much when they turn in their list of post preferences, but to be willing to "accept something a little lower than the top."

"There is no way of telling where the most work will develop," she asserted. "It may be in one of the well-known and great cities or it may be at some unknown outpost. The important thing is for the foreign service officer to be prepared for the opportunity."

One of the mistaken ideas often held about the foreign service, Miss Bassel said, is that there is a foreign service officer "type." There is no type, she insists, but "the widest difference in temperament, appearance and ideas."

"They come from different States, different colleges and universities, and they enter the service for many different reasons. Some even come with the mistaken idea of gathering material for a literary career, or for some similar self-seeking purpose.

"But those soon find the work too exacting and must make the choice between two masters. A career in the service involves not only the performance of daily tasks in an office abroad. The effective officer must throw himself into the life of the foreign community in which he serves, if he is to be most useful to his Government.

"For him 'office hours' are only a part of the working day."

German Policies Paralyzing World Markets, He Charges

State

the deal, the Secretary said he frequently had received stories of some individual or group negotiating what he called vast purchases of raw materials here. He had invoked the aid of newspapermen in running down the reports, but the department, he said, hadn't got to the end of the rainbow yet.

Dr. Funk had assailed United States trade policies and said the world would have to "surrender to American gold" or "accept the new methods of young, strong, aspiring nations."

Blames Nazis' Own Policy

Hull replied, in his statement:

"Any obstacles which German trade faces in the United States as compared with any and every other country, are entirely the result of German policy and practices. They are not the result of any special American laws dealing with German trade.

"Under American laws and regulations Germany is free to trade with the United States under the same set of conditions as can any other country in the world. The large trade the United States is now carrying on with other countries is going smoothly and with remarkable absence of dispute."

Funk had complained that the flood of gold to America forced the Reich to turn to new and daring trade principles, including the barter system, and he urged other countries to join her.

Hull, pointing to the open invitation by this country for all lands to participate in the reciprocal program, remarked that "the German authorities, however, seem to be able to trade only on their own terms as they dictate them and by their own methods as they shape them."

He charged that Germany had diverted and reduced her trade with the United States "solely to serve German purposes."

Discrimination Charged

In contrast, he said, "to the smoothly operating and productive methods of world trade," Germany's barter agreements "involve endless diplomatic negotiations.

"They involve domination by the government not only of commerce but of production, and they create arbitrary discrimination."

Dr. Thomsen had said that Germany, in October, 1937, in a note to the State Department had offered a gradual transition from the barter trading to the system followed by the United States, but had had no reply, though he said the United States had accepted the conditions laid down in it in her negotiations with Italy and Chile.

Secretary Hull said he did not remember details of the matter but remember details of the matter, but striven since 1934 to advance the reciprocal program and had pleaded with every nation in the world to subscribe to it. He said the doors, windows and even the transoms open to all who wanted to participate in such trade.

Asked whether freer trade would eliminate the necessity for expansion of various states, he emphasized the number of times he had declared that when the world moves back to the level of normal and sound trade restoration, it will have to be along the road pointed by the reciprocal agreements program. He insisted there is no alternative course.

Thomsen's reference to an abandoned plan for Germany's purchase of American cotton and wheat brought from Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, the assertion that "this cutting off of our portion of the foreign trade places a terrible burden on the American farmer." He contended the loss of the sale left the farmer with an additional surplus to drive down the price of his commodity.

Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, replied by opposing opening American markets to German goods competing with goods produced here. Germany in most such cases seeks to trade manufactured goods for raw materials.

Text of Hull's Statement

The text of Secretary Hull's statement on German trade practices follows:

This Government's trade policy sustains a large volume of trade with many countries willing like ourselves to trade in world markets on principles of equality. This trade is mutually beneficial. By carrying this policy forward, the United States is serving its own best interest and is keeping in existence trading arrangements on a world-wide basis. This is the one system whereby the world secured prosperity in past decades. Under it small nations can trade with all as equals. This Government has maintained a standing invitation to every other nation of the world without a single exception to join in this trade program based on a principle of equality and mutually profitable trade.

Any obstacles which German trade faces in the United States as compared with any and every other country are entirely the result of German policy and practices. They are not the result of any special American laws dealing with German trade. Under American laws and regulations, Germany is free to trade with the United States under the same set of conditions as can any other country of the world. The large trade the United States is now carrying on with other countries is going smoothly and with remarkable absence of dispute.

The German authorities, however, seem to be able to trade only on their own terms as they dictate them and by their own methods as they shape them.

During the past few years Germany has diverted from the United States much trade that had grown up because private business interests in both countries found it profitable. Both peoples found that such trade contributed to their economic welfare. Diversion and reduction of this trade was made solely to serve German purposes. The result was broad and decisive discrimination against American exports. American exports trying to enter Germany must face elaborate controls imposed by the German government and must compete with trade based on special barter agreements which Germany has set up. American trade cannot satisfactorily fit itself into the crevices of German need left by the barter agreements that Germany has already executed with other countries. It does not have to, nor would its interest be served by doing so.

By exchanging goods and services countries supply each other's deficiencies. Each draws upon the others for goods which it does not produce or produces at high comparative cost. This is the very essence and nature of international trade. A certain amount of similar interchange can and does, of course, take place under the so-called barter agreements, but paralyzes world markets in the process. This is especially true in markets for raw materials, such as cotton. In contrast to the smoothly operating and productive methods of world trade, barter agreements involve endless diplomatic negotiations. They involve domination by the government not only of commerce but of production, and they create arbitrary discriminations.

N. Y. Party Girl Dies From Wild Jitterbug Orgy

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 3.—Excitement she generated in the contortions of a scant-clad jitterbug dance was blamed today for the death of Mary Riley, 32-year-old brunette.

The dance to death climaxed a double-date party early today in a Riverside drive apartment after a week-end round of Manhattan bars.

The autopsy finding that she died from a spontaneous hemorrhage at the base of the brain—rather than a head wound suffered when she collapsed against a piece of furniture—was followed quickly by the release of Hugh Hillard, 32, and Forrest Leland Kelly, 20, who, like Miss Riley, were formerly of Atlanta, Ga.

With the black silk robe thrown over her underclothing, the woman was taken to a hospital by a man wearing only trousers and slippers, and died a few minutes later.

Debts And Relief

Last Saturday the Federal debt topped the $40,000,000,000 level. The preceding day the House approved a deficiency relief bill appropriating $50,000,000 less than the amount requested by the President. And yesterday the Senate Appropriations sub-committee overwhelmingly refused to restore the cut.

These events, so close in point of time, are not merely coincidental. There is a very definite connection between the mounting volume of the public debt and the growing sentiment in Congress for economy in relief outlays.

It is generally recognized that substantial reductions in relief expenditures must be effected if progress toward budget balancing is to be made. The modest cut voted by the House is significant chiefly as an indication of Congressional desire to curb lavish spending. Coupled with the WPA investigation also ordered by the House, this action leads one to hope that the present Congress will adopt a new relief policy more in keeping with the Government's means.

Representative Woodrum, who has led the House economy bloc in the fight to cut WPA appropriations, has constantly emphasized the gravity of the fiscal problems created by lavish outlays. This aspect of the relief question has not received the attention that its importance deserves, for many economy advocates are fearful that they will be accused of wanting to balance the budget regardless of sufferings inflicted upon the unemployed.

Their position should not be thus misunderstood. It is the duty of Congress to consider not only the extent of the need but also the amount that the Government can afford to spend on relief. For in the long run everybody would suffer if unrestrained spending should continue to the point of financial collapse. The necessity for reducing relief costs does not mean that ruthless, arbitrary cuts should be made. But it does mean that prompt and decisive action ought to be taken to reform a system that is inherently costly and ineffectual.

Since President Roosevelt came into office annual deficits have averaged about $3,400,000,000, while the public debt has about doubled. In the light of this alarming record, no argument should be needed to emphasize the need for a less costly system of caring for the unemployed.

Conflicting Reports

Those who had hoped for a thorough and unbiased analysis of the Tennessee Valley Authority, its activities and its policies, will be disappointed over the conflicting reports that the TVA inquiry has brought forth. The Democratic majority, with the indorsement of Republican Senator Frazier, gives the TVA a clean bill of health in most particulars. The other Republican members of the committee deduce from the same evidence an entirely different picture.

After "carefully considering the wealth of evidence on this subject," the majority concluded that "the electric rates of the Authority provide a legitimate, honest yardstick of equitable rates of private industry." In sharp contrast the minority concluded: "The representations made by the TVA, that the retail rates fixed by it to be paid by consumers in municipalities and co-operatives which use TVA power, constitute a 'yardstick' for measuring the rates of private utilities is wholly false and the propaganda put out by the TVA to the effect that it is in fact establishing such a 'yardstick' is a very grave misrepresentation."

The majority accepted estimates showing that future TVA revenues "would pay for all power costs and also would cover the annual expenses of navigation and flood control and return the total investments in these programs in about 50 years." Special engineers for the committee estimated a clear profit from operation of the power plants when the proposed 10-dam system is completed. On the contrary, the minority expresses the opinion that "the sale of power at TVA rates will not yield revenue sufficient to pay annual operating expenses and fixed charges on the investment in power facilities when no more than a fair and equitable proportion of the investment has been allocated to navigation and flood control."

When such sharp differences of opinion are drawn from the same evidence, little is slim of achieving a common understanding with regard to the TVA, or of fixing a noncontroversial policy for that agency to follow. Apparently both the majority and minority members of the investigating committee let political motives take precedence over objective analysis. As a result, the controversy over TVA is right back where it began. And the "yardstick" remains as dubious as it was in the beginning.

Interstate Free Trade

In spite of the devious manner in which many interstate trade barriers have grown up, the public is now generally aware of the menace they present. Complaints are coming from a number of sources and there is a growing awareness of the provincialism out of which these barriers rise. Yet restraints upon the free flow of goods, commodities and services have continued to multiply for want of agreement upon mutually beneficial corrective measures.

That situation gives special point to the National Conference on Interstate Trade Barriers to be held in Chicago for three days beginning Wednesday. Fortunately, this gathering is sponsored by the Council of State Governments. It will enlist the attention of State officials throughout the country. Experts will dissect the numerous devices being used to Balkanize the United States and conscientious efforts will be made to arrest this trend through State action. The conference holds immense possibilities for constructive achievement.

As pointed out by Dr. F. E. Melder, special economic adviser on trade barriers, it is not merely a free flow of goods within the country that is at stake. Aside from their economic consequences, these trade restrictions arouse serious animosities among the States. Unless legislatures and Governors are willing to resist this tendency a clamor for Federal intervention will soon arise. And the upshot might be further encroachment upon the functions of the States.

Undoubtedly the Council of State Governments is fully aware of that danger. It also realizes that the recovery movement for the country as a whole may be retarded by unwise interference with legitimate commerce at State boundary lines. That organization cannot be too highly commended for its well-planned and far-sighted attempt to grapple with this baffling problem before interstate trade barriers become firmly entrenched.

The task of the conference will not be easy. If it were simply a question of abolishing restrictive laws many difficulties would be encountered. But the problem is far more complex than that. As a matter of fact, many of the devices now being used to hamper the free flow of goods between the States were originally adopted for entirely legitimate purposes. Quarantine laws serve a laudable purpose when used to restrict the spread of disease and pests. Milk inspection laws are absolutely essential to the preservation of public health. Yet in both cases these devices are being employed by some States to protect local producers against competition from other parts of the country.

Regulation of trucks is also essential to safety on the highways and a free flow of traffic. But when different standards are fixed by 48 different States their mere variety becomes a severe handicap to interstate traffic. Some of the States levy use taxes to give special advantages to their own producers. But the use tax came into favor, along with the sales tax, largely as a means of equalizing tax burdens as between in-State and out-of-State producers. In some cases State legislatures have erected barriers for the sole purpose of aiding local industries. But where these restrictive devices are connected with protection of the public health and safety it may prove extremely difficult to draw the line between what is legitimate and what is not.

These complications, however, serve only to emphasize the desirability of attacking the problem in a concerted manner. In sponsoring such an undertaking the Council of State Governments is entitled to the fullest co-operation of the public as well as local and national government agencies.

Belgian Democracy Wins

Belgium's political crisis of last February, when the premiership changed hands three times in little more than a fortnight, has had one highly salutary result. It forced a general election and that, in turn, has shown how firmly the Belgian people are wedded to democracy.

Last Sunday's balloting in the little kingdom resulted in striking gains for the two moderate parties, the Catholics and the Liberals. Between them they now command a clear majority in both houses of the Belgian Parliament. On the other hand, the Socialists, hitherto the leading party, have been reduced to second place. The Communists just held their small representation and the Flemish Nationalists gained only one seat in the chamber.

The most important result of the elections, however, was the complete deflation of Leon Degrelle's Rexist party. Five years ago he emerged as a potential Belgian Hitler, his party winning no fewer than 21 seats in the chamber and 12 places in the Senate. Now the Rexists are left with barely a foothold in Parliament. Degrelle's rapid decline thus matches his equally rapid rise and illustrates the principle that extremist movements depend for their momentum on the possibility of achieving dictatorial power quickly and cannot stand the attrition of time.

It was also significant that in neither Eupen nor Malmedy, the two little districts taken from Germany after the war, did the Nazi group poll a majority of the votes cast or win a single seat in either house. This development is all the more striking in view of the efforts made by Germany to keep the German element in Belgium in line. Thus at least one Germanic community, enabled to participate in a free election, has used that freedom to repudiate Hitler.

In this connection it is interesting to note that another German-speaking region, the independent principality of Liechtenstein, is also averse to Hitlerism. A privately circulated declaration, demanding continued independence, has been signed by 95 per cent of the eligible voters of that tiny wedge of land between Switzerland and what was Austria.

Nazi Assurances

None can reasonably accuse Neville Chamberlain of failing to show every consideration for Germany's legitimate ambitions, or of prematurely refusing to regard its present government as untrustworthy. Indeed, the prevalent criticism of the British Prime Minister has been precisely the opposite. He has been almost viciously attacked for his willingness to place confidence in Nazi assurances.

Consequently it is of profound significance when Mr. Chamberlain, as in his prepared speech to the House of Commons yesterday, officially asserts that Hitler's promises to him "have now been thrown to the winds absolutely;" that British confidence in Germany's word has been "completely destroyed," and that the "great departure" of Britain's new defensive alliance with Poland is forced by inability to rely on anything that Hitler says.

Mr. Chamberlain's change of course means, in the political sphere, that further German aggression, similar to that which destroyed Czecho-Slovakia, will automatically bring war. That much is obvious. But the implications in the economic field are almost as important. "I was looking forward with strong hopes," the prime minister said yesterday, to the outcome of Anglo-German trade negotiations "which might have benefited both our countries and many other countries besides." But, he added, "confidence has been shaken and is not easily repaired."

It may be hoped that Hans Thomsen, the German charge d'affaires in Washington, has now read Mr. Chamberlain's speech and pondered its significance. In this country, as in Great Britain, the sequel to the Munich agreement has utterly destroyed such faith in Nazi integrity as remained. Here, as in the other democracies, there is no longer any confidence in any assurance made by that government or by any of its agents.

Yet the official Nazi representative in Washington, in an interview given the International News Service, urges that the United States, through a trade agreement with Germany, should assist that country to build up its strength, presumably for further conquests. Germany, he says, would absorb huge quantities of American farm surpluses if the United States, "comes half way."

The trouble is, as Mr. Chamberlain has pointed out, that it is impossible to go "half way" with a government which does not know the meaning of fair compromise. Germany undoubtedly would be glad to absorb large quantities of American products. But a glance at her long record of repudiation, confiscation and seizure shows how slim is the chance that any payment would be made in return.

What Dr. Thomsen says, in effect, is that his government needs American products and would be glad to pay for them—in promises. What Mr. Chamberlain says, in effect, is that only fools will any longer place trust in Nazi promises. The British Prime Minister knows. He trusted Hitler and was badly let down. The memory is recent. So recent that Dr. Thomsen's blandishments seem, to put it mildly, incredibly naive.

Nostalgia

About a hundred years ago Tom Sawyer, Huck Finn and Jo Harper, pioneers, grew tired of their little Missouri home town. So they sailed down the Mississippi, causing great anxiety to those they left behind. Wanderlust was an old story then, one told since the beginning of time. Yet today it is still a new story, with freshness in the telling.

Hope Brewster, of Memphis, aged 22 and with spring in her blood, can tell you how Huck felt. With her beloved violin she stepped into a rowboat recently and traveled 90 miles down the Mississippi River. She never dreamed she was being searched for by speedboats and airplanes, and knew nothing of the hullabaloo until she registered at a hotel in Helena, Ark. All she had in mind, she said, was to "get away from Memphis."

Before the Memphis boosters denounce Hope as an undesirable citizen let them realize that to her the town had become the symbol of Where-You-Are as distinguished from Where-You-Want-To-Be. Even the sturdiest pillar of a community never wholly abandons his desire to make the trip from the first to the second. And the eventual realization that it is only a shuttle between Wibbleton and Wobbleton offers no real encouragement to the earnest sociologist.

Nature, the great gardener, knows more than the Department of Agriculture about ways of rotating crops.

Land For Unemployed?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Walter Lippmann, in his "Traveling At Home," tells us that he has suddenly had it come to his notice that there is yet a lot of open space land in the United States. He suggests, therefore, that, ". . . what has disappeared is not the opportunity open to the pioneer settler but the willingness and the capacity that made the pioneers take advantage of the opportunity that was open to them."

Thus, after ten years of depression, Mr. Lippmann still sees fit to be romantic about the problem of unemployment. He wishes to imply that if our unemployed were willing to do a little hard work and to undergo some inconveniences, well, then, there it is, plenty of open spaces. One might ask, is this land now also free? And if it costs money, where are the unemployed to get that money to buy or rent this land?

The question of subsistence farms has been discussed before. It remains that after a man his produced for his own needs in the way of farm products, he still must needs produce a quantity of produce, livestock, or a crop for the market in order to exchange for tools and other manufactured goods. Where is the modern pioneer to find a market for his products when we don't know how to dispose of the surplus we have on hand now?

But let us say that our ten million unemployed with their families had the means and hardihood to settle the land on a pioneer standard, and on an entirely self-sufficient basis. What would happen to the economics of our country? Why nothing at all in the way of a change from the present. If we could thus eliminate and isolate the unemployed from our present economic setup, we would be eliminating that section of our population which is at present consuming our country's productive surplus, with Government aid. If this practice were to be discontinued, surpluses in goods would begin to mount again, there would be a new cycle of overproduction, followed by a new group of unemployed.

The solution to our present problems is not in having people adopt a lower living standard, but quite the contrary. We must have a more equitable sharing of profits both from land and industry, in order to provide greater purchasing power and greater mass consuming of the things we have on hand that seem to choke us in our economic activities.

Miss Anderson's Concert

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What more fitting place is there for the people of Washington to hear Marian Anderson than from the steps of the Lincoln Memorial?

Discrimination In The Government Service

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Federal employes are very much interested in your accounts of Senator Ellender's investigations of "czarisms" in the Government. This is a most worthy cause, and he should be given the most hearty co-operation of the newspapers, for it has already worked wonders among some of the lower-group employes. In a quiet way many things have been adjusted for fear a report might go to the Senator.

There are many employes who have just cause to go to him, but they are afraid of their positions, for they know full well what the results will be. The czars may speak kindly there, but O, My! what will follow we know too well.

Length of service, education and training have nothing to do with what is handed an employe in the Government service. It certainly is a matter of the person backing you, as to your status.

Many chiefs go years and never even say a "Good morning" to a clerk.

One unit head, with an "excellent" efficiency rating, and 16 years of service on the same job, was removed without any explanation at all, and the job given to a clerk with less than a year in the office, and no training and no education, except for filing. The one demoted had three college degrees, besides 18 years of office training, and study for advancement in her work.

Please continue to lend your support to this good work of Senator Ellender.

A CONSTANT READER.
Washington, March 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After reading the articles in your paper on March 30 relative to the complaint of the clerks in the Post Office Department as to a promotion of a grade 3 clerk to grade 6, I would like to add the following for your information as well as the general public so that the clerks will not be considered insubordinate:

Mr. Dixon is a political appointee, having been brought in from the field to act as superintendent only within the last three years or more, and he is subject to change. He has charge of over 40 clerks, all of whom, with the exception of three, were higher than Mrs. Josephine Smither, who received the grade 6 appointment, and had been in the department years and years longer than she. Also, as you will note from the testimony, Mr. Dixon was only able to give as his reason for her promotion the fact that she was "more suitable." More suitable for what? He admitted that all of his employes were good workers.

Upon hearing of this very unusual promotion, a number of the employes protested to Mr. Donaldson, the personnel director, who assured them that four times he had returned to Mr. Dixon the papers for Mrs. Smither's promotion, saying that it was a hot potato that would be dropped back into Mr. Dixon's lap. Also for Mr. Dixon carefully to go over his eligibles and Mr. Donaldson informed us that Mr. Dixon stated no grade 3 clerk or grade 4 clerk was qualified. Therefore, we are not wrong in assuming that Mr. Dixon insists he has a division of unqualified people, but in view of his testimony at the Senate hearing it would appear otherwise.

In view of all this, what then can the employe expect? In the future Mr. Dixon goes out to the field but his secretary still draws her $2,300 and up salary regardless of where she may be put. Do you think truly this is fair for the others who really know something about how the division operates and have put forth their very best efforts?

Voorhis' Labor Views

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Collective bargaining by this time ought, of course, to need no more defense in the arena of American public opinion than the Bill of Rights or the Declaration of Independence. Unfortunately, however, there are still some well meaning and pitifully uninformed people who really believe that the organization of labor is what precipitates disorder and brings injury to the community. That earnest, fearless young liberal Democratic Congressman from California, Jerry Voorhis, knocked in the head this absurd but not infrequent belief when, in one of his legislative speeches, he said:

"Lawlessness and chronic outbreaks of violence have taken place, not in industries where labor is fully organized, but in places like Harlan County, Ky., where the right of organization has been resisted by capital by all the means at its command, both fair and foul. And a peculiar thing has been that for every violent offense of labor there have been several such offenses by embattled industry. And for every man beaten up by labor, several from labor's ranks have actually been killed.

"For history proves that in every industry where labor has gained full organization and the recognition of its equal place, labor in turn has kept its agreements, industrial peace has been generally maintained, and the sense of responsibility of labor has been every bit as great as that of capital. We cannot find an example in our history where a major labor union broke a contract. But labor cannot keep agreements until labor has an agreement to keep. Labor cannot take responsibility until it is accorded a position where it can become responsible."

In this and various other public utterances, this outstanding progressive Representative who combines the soul of a dreamer with the mental clarity of a practical man, accurately sums up the Nation's political and economic problems. The country is fortunate that he is one of the "mavericks" who survived November, 1938.

Fear Of Communism?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: European statesmanship does not ring true to me. I ask myself: Are the great masses being fed on hocus-pocus indignation while the real rulers of the democracies dicker with the dictators?

High finance knows no boundaries, and am I right in thinking that high finance, the real ruler of Europe, plays underneath with Hitler, Mussolini? Would we have the present debacle in central Europe, would Czecho-Slovakia lie impotent if England and France, or its financiers objected? Are they secretly glad to have the paranoiac nationalisms of central Europe, little tinderboxes of war, banded together by Hitler into a solid barrier raised between Europe and Russian communism? Is not Russian communism the pivot of all this postwar politics?

In short, Russia has committed the unpardonable financial sin—put the sacred, age-long profit system out of commission. There is only one common fear in Europe, fear of this Russian communism infecting Europe. To guard against this, England backs Franco, does not send her fleet to smash Mussolini, as she so easily could, when he takes Ethiopia, and allows Hitler to wipe out the too intensified (really agrarian) nationalisms of central Europe.

And speaking of food, you can get a magnificent meal of soup, salad (always served as a second course), meat and vegetables, dessert and coffee for 35 cents. Note! The California malted milk consists of three scoops of ice cream, flavoring (chocolate or what not), a dipper of rich milk, and malted milk powder—all beaten up into a semi-liquid consistency. If you are stylish it will cost you 15 cents, if humble but self-respecting, 10 cents. It has a violent effect on the Eastern digestion.

You may sometimes be surprised in receiving common courtesy, or even attention, from Los Angeles streetcar conductors or clerks in the cheaper stores, but do not expect it. If you do, you will be poisoned with continuous discharges of adrenalin. If you do not, you will have at least intervals of calm. In San Diego, however, you can ask a pleasant question and get an answer that is not only good-humored but often humorous.

In Forest Lawn Memorial Park (in Glendale, a few miles outside of Los Angeles) you can get married, christened or buried. Death is, however, the main preoccupation of the Forest Lawn Memorial Park Association, Inc. For the disposal of your earthly remains you have a number of choices. You can be buried in the ground or (I think but am not sure) inserted entire into a crypt. You can be cremated and put in an urn or into a niche. The cost of one form of container or another ranges from $45 to $115,000. (These are the figures that were given me. I cannot vouch for them.) If you are forehanded, you can invest in a mortuary trust for yourself, which "when you pass on . . . is immediately available for funeral expenses."

The smaller room whose walls are lined with niches is sometimes called, at Forest Lawn, a Columbarium. This has, if inaccurate, some Latin justification. As Horace said, Coelum non animum mutant qui trans mare currant. Morituri to salutamus, Forest Lawn!

You will see, in walking down any main street of Hollywood or Los Angeles any fine sunny morning, six Shirley Temples, ditto Clark Gables, ditto Robert Taylors. There is a heavy incidence of Gene Raymonds, for some reason or other. Greta Garbo and Marlene Dietrich rate about three followers per hour (traffic being normal). The only people you will have any difficulty in recognizing are the movie stars themselves—except for Adolphe Menjou. Adolphe Menjou looks exactly like Adolphe Menjou.

In Exposition Park you will see the enthralling bones of prehistoric creatures who were trapped in the La Brea tar pits. There is a baby mastodon there which stands only 4 or 5 feet tall. Some of the footprints on the sands of time there shown measure 2 to 3 feet. In La Brea Park you can see the asphalt traps in which these mammoths died and watch the movement of the gas, coming up in slow sticky bubbles.

The Legal Background

Our Dual School Set-Up

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a former member of the Board of Education, former president of the North Capitol Citizens Association and a resident of the District of Columbia for over 25 years, I am vitally interested in the controversy that has arisen over the holding of a concert by Negroes in Central High School. The enclosure is a copy of my letter of protest to the Board of Education. This letter may be of interest to your readers.

HENRY GILLIGAN.
Washington, March 30.

Mrs. Marian Wade Doyle,
President,
Board of Education,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Mrs. Doyle:

In view of the continued efforts on the part of the Howard University to secure the use of Central High School for a concert to be given by Marian Anderson, without agreement as to the conditions under which the board gave its assent, please permit me to make the following observations:

The organic act of 1906 clearly recognized and continued a dual school system for white and colored, and no legislation since has changed this status.

The act regulating the use of public school buildings and grounds in the District of Columbia, approved March 4, 1915 (Public Law No. 314, Sixty-Third Congress), places in the Board of Education the duty of establishing the rules and regulations under which the community use of these buildings may be had, and the "terms and conditions" governing such use, such use being limited to a "purpose directly connected with the public school system and as further provided for in this act." There is certainly no apparent intent on the part of Congress to permit the use of these buildings for private gain.

The rules prescribed by the Board of Education for the civic use of school buildings are set forth in Paragraphs or Sections 2 and 3 of the 1926 Revision of the By-Laws, Rules, Regulations and Selected Statutes of the board, a copy of which is in my possession as a former member of the board.

Section 2 reads, in part: "* * * Such use will be granted under regulations designed to guard the schools from sectarian uses, from uses tending to create unrest and acrimonious discussion in the community, and from teachings contrary to the spirit of our American institutions."

Section 3 reads: "The use of school facilities will not be granted to any organization for any purposes which will result in a financial profit accruing to the organization to which such school facilities have been granted."

Disregarding Section 3, can you or anyone else in the District of Columbia conceive of any use of Central High School that would lead to more "unrest and acrimonious discussion in the community" than the proposed use? If it be granted, for argument, that there is no financial profit accruing to Howard University in the proposed use, what is there to stop the Secretary of the Interior from permitting the use of the beautiful auditoriums that come under his supervision for this concert?

Why does not the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, who is reported by the newspapers as having presided at a protest meeting, insist that the concert be given in one of the auditoriums of the Government? Why does not Mrs. Roosevelt, who has expressed her keen disappointment over the possible failure of the concert being given, use her great influence in having a Government auditorium opened for this purpose?

If correctly reported, Miss Anderson has expressed a willingness to sing for nothing, or for $500—instead of for $600 or $1,250 paid her for the first two concerts and $1,750 to be paid her for the proposed concert—if so, why does not the committee (the Howard University committee), accept such an offer and use one of the large Negro churches or the great outdoors or the National Theater, etc, for the concert?

In my judgment those who have been endeavoring to force the Board of Education to grant this privilege do not represent the great majority of Negroes of the District of Columbia, and represent only a scattering of white residents of the District. Let us hope the several members of the Senate and the House of Representatives who have permitted their names to be used by the proponents of this privilege have no political mental reservations on the subject.

Permit me to say that I feel confident I represent the overwhelming sentiment of the people of the District of Columbia, white and colored, in urging the board to take no backward step in its present attitude. The dual status of our schools and of the school buildings should be strictly maintained under the law and the rules of the Board of Education. Despite statements to the contrary, I have no racial prejudice whatever. The question with me is one of law, rules and the best interests of our colored and white people.

Yours very truly,
HENRY GILLIGAN.

Smiths Outnumber Joneses in New City Directory

The Washington City Directory appeared yesterday in a new blue and red cover, listing 437,664 persons who either work or live in the District. It has 90 pages and 7,432 names more than the last edition.

Franklin D. Roosevelt is not listed as the "first citizen," but Arnold L. Elsberg, a trainman, is. "Bergens" still bow to the "Charlie McCarthy's," 13 to 12, and there are 15½ pages of "Smiths" and only 10 of "Joneses."

The R. L. Polk Co., publishers, announced the volume would receive the largest circulation in other cities ever accorded a District of Columbia directory.

Choosing A French President

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

EIGHT HUNDRED and eighty-eight solemn Frenchmen, members of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate, will go to the polls on April 5. The polling booth will be a little silver urn in the Hall of Congress in the Palace of Versailles. Ten of these men, selected by lot, will count the ballots. After one vote, probably two votes, and possibly three votes, the newly chosen fifteenth President of the Third Republic will ride triumphantly back through the Bois de Boulogne and go into a seven-year "captivity" at the Elysee Palace.

No one can foretell, with certainty, who the next President will be, and not very many Frenchmen care. Only three official candidates, Fernand Buisson, former president of the chamber; Justin Godard, former minister, and Henri Queuille, minister of agriculture, have so far offered themselves for the post. Others are lurking discreetly in the background, placing their names in the press as "possibilities" but refusing coyly to say "yes" or "no."

This is smart politics here, as it is the world over. When the members of the National Assembly meet for their traditional luncheon just before the ceremony, the candidates and their friends will get to work. There will be a hasty solicitation of votes, much whispering, and patting on the back a la Tammany. For an absolute majority of the 888 votes is necessary for election.

THE INDIFFERENCE of the French public is caused not only by its inability to cast a direct vote, but also by the lack of influence which the President enjoys. The constitution of 1875 gives the head of the French Republic the greatest of actual powers, far more than the constitution allows the Chief Executive of the United States. He can initiate legislation with the two chambers, dismiss the Chamber of Deputies for a month with the consent of the Senate, and if he feels they do not represent the national will at all, send them packing for good. He is held to be irresponsible except in the case of high treason.

But when Presidents have tried to exercise their outlined privileges, the country has let out a squeal of protest and taken prompt action. Marshal Maurice de MacMahon dissolved the Chamber in 1877 but he was forced to resign soon afterward. In 1924 leading men of state went on strike refusing to form a Cabinet or support one until President Alexandre Millerand left office.

Few Presidents Have Served Full Terms

AS A MATTER of fact, only five of the 14 Presidents have served complete terms. Sadi Carnot and Paul Doumer were assassinated. Paul Deschanel went out of his mind and started to sign his decrees with a flourishing "Napoleon" before he was hurriedly removed. Jules Grevy, the only person to run and be elected the second time, left the Palace 22 months after his second inauguration because his son-in-law had been carrying on too brisk a trade in decorations to the Legion of Honor. Casimir Perier resigned in protest against the "lack of power" to which he was condemned.

For "lack of power" is what the President now possesses, whether he likes it or not. The National Assembly desires an honest and respected "first-class second-rater." It wants a President who can preside, with discreet and careful words, and with common sense, over all Cabinet meetings. When a Cabinet falls, he should be sufficiently in touch with the popular will to choose the best person to head the next Cabinet. But the French have had their taste of "strong men" and they want no more of them. Clemenceau and Briand were turned down, mainly by Senate votes, because they were precisely that.

ALBERT LEBRUN, the retiring President, has corresponded nicely to the popular notion of what a President should be—a man of solid peasant stock, pleasant and simple in his tastes, a gentleman who can represent his country with dignity at state functions and utter nicely turned sentiments. If Lebrun should offer himself again—and that possibility is very real today—he would have no difficulty in obtaining the post. Mme. Lebrun, however, is tired of the protocol which rules her every step. She wants to leave the roomy and rather gloomy palace and spend her days with her children and grandchildren.

If Jules Jeanneney, seven times consecutive president of the Senate, should be a candidate, there would be little opposition either, for there is the making of a tradition that the president of the Senate is entitled to the Presidency of the Republic. Gaston Doumergue, Doumer, Fallieres and Lebrun held both positions. But Jeanneney is 75 years old. The duties are onerous. Unless he changes his mind suddenly, he will not "choose to run."

Herriot Would Be A Popular Choice

A CHOICE which would please the French, and Americans too, would be that of Edouard Herriot, perhaps the most versatile of all French politicians of today. Herriot, who once taught Premier Daladier at the Lycee of Lyon, has been mayor of that important city since 1905. He has been premier on three occasions, and president of the Chamber of Deputies since 1925. He is a splendid orator, a man for whom the words "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity," have a deep and personal significance. A writer and scholar of note, he exemplifies the finest of French bourgeois training and spirit. There is something "homey" about him which appeals to the French. But—he says he will not be a candidate, and that decision may be final.

There are other unannounced "candidates," to be taken more or less seriously: Albert Sarraut, minister of the interior and a member of at least half the post-war cabinets; Francois Pietri, cultivated and cultured Corsican and one-time minister of the marine; Leon Berard, Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet's recent emissary to Nationalist Spain; Henry Roy, former minister, and Camille Chautemps, former premier.

AND THERE has been talk—more serious talk—of Premier Daladier, Fernand Buisson and Pierre Laval, the swarthy little Auvergnat who is mortally hated by the Left. It seems highly improbable, now that dictatorial powers have been voted, that Daladier would want to leave his present position. The Nazi menace is still too pressing. But his name is still among those most frequently mentioned.

Laval might have a chance with the Senate—he sits there now—but there are too many deputies who dislike him. If Laval does not run, he might swing his weight in the Senate in favor of Buisson, who, as a former president of the chamber, still has many "copains" at his call. Buisson was elected as a Socialist deputy in 1909, but his leanings to the Left, highly doubtful then, have long since disappeared.

The 3,000,000 franc-a-year job, then, is still very much in the open market. Though not excited by the election, France is watching it this year with less than customary indifference. The danger of an external explosion is great, and it wants a person with cool head and strict impartiality to sit in the seat as "master of ceremonies." President Lebrun's chances of re-election are thus exceptionally good.

Police Court Held Lacking in Power To Disbar Mullen

John P. Mullen was reinstated as an attorney yesterday by the Court of Appeals, which held that the Police Court had no power to disbar him on a charge of soliciting business.

Justice Edgerton ruled control over the bar of the Police Court was lodged in the District Court. Mullen was accused of unprofessional conduct by the committee on grievances of the District Bar Association.

Police Judge Edward M. Curran dissented from Mullen's conviction on this charge, saying "the practice of the law is a precarious one and it offers a fertile field for many complaints by disgruntled clients." He said he had no hesitation in finding Mullen not guilty.

Having decided that the Police Court had no right to hear the case, the Court of Appeals refused to review the charges against Mullen.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The European Coalition

ALTHOUGH HITLER in his speech on Saturday spoke at great length about the injustices of the Treaty of Versailles, he must know that Mr. Chamberlain is reacting to the destruction of the Munich agreement. In Mr. Chamberlain's mind Munich was the liquidation of the Versailles settlement and of the alliances which enforced it. Great Britain and France were prepared to recognize German supremacy in Eastern Europe on the assumption that Germany would consolidate her position gradually and peaceably.

The sudden, unannounced, and unexplained seizure of Czecho-Slovakia cannot be reconciled with the pledges given at Munich or with the theory of the Munich settlement. Hitler's procedure, his secret haste in capturing the Czech armaments and the gold supply, followed by the demands on Rumania and the threats against Poland, do not make sense on the assumption that his object is to consolidate a Germanic sphere of influence in Eastern Europe. His procedure is intelligible only on the theory that he is seizing military supplies for the purpose of re-establishing the military superiority over Britain and France, which he possessed at Munich, and has been losing ever since Munich. The procedure indicates that he is raiding Eastern Europe for supplies with which to challenge by intimidation the western powers.

Britain Now Sure Of Military Strength

WE MAY BE reasonably certain that nothing less than the conviction that Hitler meant to challenge Britain would have induced Mr. Chamberlain to adopt so quickly the policy of organizing a continental military coalition. The British do not act on the basis of remote hypothetical dangers; they act empirically on immediate and present dangers. They would not now be reversing the whole trend of their European policy if they were not thoroughly persuaded that their own vital security was in jeopardy. Having become persuaded, they have returned to the policy which British always adopts when the British people believe, as they did in the case of Napoleon, that they are dealing with an ambition to dominate Europe by military force.

But the British are also a people who have learned through long experience to be realistic. They are not quixotic and they do not take unnecessary risks. Last summer they felt that they could not take the risk of war because the Germans were at the peak of their power, their own armaments were unready, the French were divided and weak, the Czechs were isolated, the Poles unfriendly, and the Russians unreliable. So they capitulated. If now they are engaged in organizing a resistance, it must be because they consider that the balance of power has shifted in their favor, that the weaknesses and deficiencies before Munich have been substantially corrected. The British would not be taking so strong a position in their diplomacy if they were not reasonably certain that their military position is strong.

Hitler Has Suffered Diplomatic Defeat

THEY CAN, however, be under no illusions about the risks of the policy they have adopted. They are organizing a coalition, and history shows that it is easier to organize a coalition than to maintain it in being over a long period of time. There is truth in Hitler's contemptuous references to paper pacts; they are no better than the force of the weakest member of the combination.

Moreover, the weakest member of the coalition is bound to bear the brunt of the attack, and Hitler's warning to the Poles and Rumanians is not to be taken lightly. By entering this coalition they have staked their independence on its ultimate success. They have drawn upon themselves the cold and relentless hostility of a man whose consuming passion it is to obtain revenge for his own defeats.

In this past week Hitler has suffered the greatest diplomatic defeat of his whole career, a defeat comparable with, but greater in magnitude than, the defeat he suffered last May when the Czechs mobilized and the British and French supported them. Hitler never forgot that blow to his prestige and all through the summer he worked by every means in his power to destroy the Czechs.

The Poles are now in a position like that of the Czechs a year ago. Their fate will be that of the Czechs if they do not avert it by adopting a perfectly clear and definite line, conceding at once whatever they are able to concede, and standing absolutely on whatever they mean to defend. The British on their part, if they retreat from the position they have taken, will have assumed an awful responsibility in inviting the Poles to enter the coalition.

Coalition May Prove Guarantor of Peace

YET, though the difficulties and dangers of the coalition are obvious and are real, this coalition may prove capable of guaranteeing the peace of Europe. For unlike the collective security arrangements of the past, every member of this coalition feels itself threatened in its vital interest. None feels itself to be unselfishly trying to save some one else. That kind of coalition does tend to hold together, and a coalition which really holds together will almost certainly not be attacked by a military offensive.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Modern Hiawatha

Hi—A commission has just reported that the American Indian is making economic progress under a bill passed in 1934, giving him many business devices of the white man. Didn't you once write a column on that? P. K. T.

Yes, and this is approximately it:

By the shores of Gitchee Gummee,
With incorporation papers,
In the pleasant summer morning
Hiawatha called a meeting,
Called the routine morning huddle.

All the air was full of freshness,
All the earth was bright and joyous,
And before him, through the sunshine,
Westward toward the neighboring forest,
Passed the bees, the honey-makers,
Passed the bees, the big go-getters,
Out to top last season's figures.

Level spread the lake before him,
From its bosom leaped the sturgeon.
Leaped the Sturgeon called Ki-Wa-Nis,
Sparkling, flashing in the sunshine,
Saying in the sturgeon language,
"How is business? How is business?"

From the brow of Hiawatha
Gone was every trace of sorrow;
He was now a corporation,
With an "Inc." upon his letters,
With his letterheads imposing,

Telephones were all about him,
Noisy phones with constant ringing,
Telephones and heap wrong numbers,
Pretty squaws with long, plucked eyebrows,
Pretty squaws to take his letters,
Chewing gum and humming jazz stuff—
All the blessings of the White Man!

Through the shining mist of morning,
Came a birch canoe with paddles
(Quantity production paddles),
And within it came a people
From the distant land of Wabun—
"Wabun Homesteads On Time Payments."
Wabun with its model houses,
Modern plumbing, pink tiled bathrooms,
Radios and lawns and hedges—
"Wabun—Home of Happy Injuns."

Then the well-dressed Hiawatha
Led the strangers to his wigwam—
Five-room wigwam with a sun porch
(With a sample room and office);
Showed them signs that read "No Loafing,"
"Business Only" and "No Parking,"
"Do It Now" and "Time Is Money,"
Showed them catalogues and price cards,
Let them play the big card index.
"We are now all corporations,"
Spake the smiling Hiawatha,
"We are organized, efficient;
We have regulation war cries,
We have corporation powwows;
All our ancient tribal dances
Are now corporation smokers;
We have order slips and ledgers,
We have deficits and failures,
We have corporation taxes—

Came the cry "Farewell Forever!"
From the forest dark and lonely,
As the tribes crashed through the timber
With the speed of many rabbits.

"Farewell, Farewell, Hiawatha!
Love and kisses to the Senate
And its corporation papers.
Lo, the Injun has his failings,
But the Red Man is no sucker!"

20 Years Of Failure

By Mark Sullivan

The Neutrality Dream

ON WEDNESDAY, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will begin hearings on a new neutrality bill. Of all the matters that have vital concern for America—and they are sadly numerous—perhaps what we do about neutrality carries the largest freight of weal or woe. The degree of our concern about neutrality is suggested by the frequency with which Congress has tried to do something about it. The new bill now proposed succeeds one that is less than two years old. That in turn succeeded another enacted in 1936. Congress has passed four neutrality measures in four years.

To understand the neutrality problem in its present stage, let us review its successive stages, beginning in 1919. It is a 20-year history of attempts at neutrality that did not work. I repeat here a summary contained in a radio broadcast I delivered a little while ago.

After the Great War, the world, looking about for some way to save themselves from repetition of that calamity, devised, through President Wilson and others, an institution that was to achieve permanent world peace. This was to be done by means of collective action. They set up the League of Nations. The characteristic of this method of preserving pesce was, that it was collective, it was something in which all nations were to participate. But this experiment toward peace by collective action did not work.

Collective Action Toward Peace Fails

SUBSEQUENTLY there were other steps toward collective security. All the movements toward peace during the 1920s took the collective form. Some 50 nations united in the Kellogg-Briand Pact. It did not prevent war. Nine nations united in the Nine-Power Pact. That did not prevent war.

Parallel with these attempts at collective security went another effort, likewise collective, to achieve reduction of armament, by collective action. In 1922 at Washington was held a world conference for limitation of armament. As a conference, it was extraordinarily successful. At that conference more ships were sunk than had been sunk in any naval battle in history. The ships were literally sunk. America agreed to sink some battleships and actually sunk them. Great Britain agreed to sink some and actually sunk them. All the nations in the conference agreed to limit the naval armament they would build in the future. That seemed a long step toward prevention of war.

But the agreement expired in 1936. Japan would not renew it. necessarily the other nations did not renew. The attempt at collective disarmament failed, just as the other attempts at peace by collection action failed.

THE LAST GESTURE toward collective peace, a gallant but forlorn last cry for the collective method, occurred in 1933. President Roosevelt, in a radio speech, addressed to the world, and translated into all languages, called on the nations to enter into a collective pact of nonaggression. The nations did not heed. Their silence was the sad end of a cycle that had begun in high hope after the Great War.

We were now at a landmark. We were at the end of attempts at peace by collective action. We were now back to the ancient rule expressed in the verse of Wordsworth:

"The good old rule . . . the simple plan.
That he should take who has the power,
And he should keep who can."

If that verse seems shocking, if it seems a too extreme and too literary description of the condition today—well, just read it again. This time read it in prose. Read one paragraph from the speech which Mussolini made in Rome Sunday before last. This is the verse of William Wordsworth translated into the prose of Benito Mussolini:

"We must arm. The watchword is: More cannon, more ships, more airplanes, at whatever cost, with whatever means, even if it means wiping out all that is called civil life. When one is strong one is dear to one's friends and feared by one's enemies. Since prehistoric time one shout has come down on the waves of the centuries: 'Woe to the weak!'"

Neutrality Viewed Lone Hope of U. S.

THAT PARAGRAPH from Mussolini's speech a little over a week ago and repeated in spirit by Hitler last Saturday—that is the picture of the world today. It ought not to be. But it is. We must recognize that it is.

What ought America to do about it? For some six years we have been giving thought to that question. Final failure of attempts at peace by collective action came about 1933. We in America realized then, that if we were to have peace for ourselves, we must achieve it by ourselves. Let the other nations fight if they would; we would preserve peace. We would practice neutrality, neutrality at any price. That was our mood.

We are a peace-wishing nation, a war-hating and war-fearing nation. There were among us many—and they were among the very best of our people—who for years had dedicated themselves to the collective peace movements of the 1920's. These now dedicated themselves to achieving neutrality for America under the new conditions. They were inspired, in many cases by fear. They saw a world in arms—war going on, and more serious war threatened. And they were desperate to keep America out of it. In this spirit were proposed many measures, some enacted by Congress, some clamoring for enactment. I shall discuss the pending proposals in a future article.

Armed Aid To All

By Barnet Nover

Britain Broadens Her Commitments

NOT WITHOUT reason did Adolf Hitler in his Wilhelmshaven speech direct his bitterest barbs at Great Britain. For if the path to further Nazi aggression has been made very much more difficult than it was a month ago, it is Great Britain which is primarily responsible.

Last week Neville Chamberlain warned the Third Reich, in a pronouncement that marked a revolutionary change in British foreign policy, that an attack on Poland would bring in Great Britain on Poland's side. On Monday the British prime minister followed this up by declaring that his government was prepared to broaden the commitment to Poland to include all other European nations whose independence is threatened by the Nazi regime.

If, therefore, the Nazi steamroller is now forced to halt in its tracks, the Fuehrer has Chamberlain to thank for this unexpected development. If, on the other hand, Hitler decides to push ahead regardless he will have not only his intended victim to reckon with but also Great Britain, France and the other members of the new grand alliance which Great Britain is now bringing into being, even as happened in Napoleon's day. No wonder Hitler is furious with his great and good friend of Munich days.

SPECIFICALLY, Chamberlain's latest declaration means a British guarantee of aid to Rumania and Yugoslavia and possibly Turkey similar to that already made to Poland. In whichever direction Nazi Germany chooses next to move, therefore, she will court British opposition. For in addition to the pledges made or indicated during the past week to central and southeastern European nations, there are also the pledges embodied in the Franco-British alliance of British support to Belgium, the Netherlands and Switzerland, in the event those nations are attacked.

Thus the policy of limited liability heretofore pursued in Europe by successive British governments has been replaced by one of practically unlimited liability. Great Britain is, in fact, now wholeheartedly committed to barring further Nazi aggressions in whatever corner of the continent they may occur.

Britain Feels She Is Directly Threatened

THE REASON for this change in policy is not hard to find. It is doubtful whether the Chamberlain government is any more interested in preserving Poland or Rumania or Yugoslavia as such than it was in preserving Czecho-Slovakia, as such.

What it is interested in is safeguarding the security and the interests of Great Britain herself. But these interests, London is now convinced, are directly threatened by continued German aggressions.

The conviction has grown in England that if Hitler is not now stopped in eastern Europe it may be impossible to stop him when he gets ready to move west. The protection of Poland and Rumania and Yugoslavia at this moment is, therefore, essential to Britain's purposes.

IN THE CASE of Rumania, the British stake in preventing the establishment of a German protectorate, is actually more vital and direct than in the case of Poland.

For many decades the protection of the route to India has been a cardinal aspect of British policy. That is why throughout the nineteenth century Great Britain fought all efforts by Russia to press down to the Mediterranean and replace Turkey at the Golden Horn. There is every reason why German hegemony in the region of the Dardanelles should be as warmly opposed as was the threatened hegemony of Czarist Russia.

ONCE IN CONTROL of Rumania, Germany would have a foothold on the Black Sea. The Rumanian coast could then serve as a springboard either for an attack on the Ukraine or for a drive to dominate the eastern Mediterranean.

The latter is an old ambition of Germany's anyway. It was the motive behind the efforts to build the Berlin-Bagdad railway. And there is no reason why, in this particular, Hitler should balk at wrapping himself in the mantle of the former Kaiser.

As a matter of fact, Turkey has shown, during recent days, that she is fully aware of the threat to her security embodied in continued German expansion on the continent of Europe. She has so far successfully fought off all efforts by the Third Reich to secure a monopoly of Turkish trade. She has kept green her alliance with Soviet Russia, her entente with other Balkan powers and her good relations with Great Britain in order better to withstand totalitarian pressure. But if the western democracies should permit Rumania to be subjugated by the Third Reich, Turkey would have little choice but to make whatever terms she could with Hitler.

Will Hitler Read Writing On Wall?

IT IS, therefore, to Britain's direct interest to have Rumania independent. And less directly but nonetheless vitally it is also to Britain's interest to save other nations from the fate of Austria and Czecho-Slovakia.

That was true in the past as it is today. But old habits of mind die hard. Hitherto British leaders have felt that Great Britain's commitments should extend no farther than the Rhine. It is of tremendous significance that they no longer feel that way and that their change of mind and policy has received the wholehearted acclaim of the British people.

Britain's present stand cannot but make some impression on Hitler and his regime. It should give the Nazis pause. But whether the Fuehrer will read the writing on the wall is by no means certain.

Again and again, despite the advice of his more cautious advisers, he has discounted Great Britain's opposition. He was invariably right and they were always wrong. He may feel, therefore, that the new British position is simply bluff and that he can go ahead in the future as he has in the past, winning ever new victories by threat of war alone.

That is why, although the latest pronouncements of Chamberlain have heartened the world and helped clear the air, the threat of war has by no means been wholly averted.

Taxicab Insurance Probe to Be Ended

The House District Committee yesterday indicated it would not press investigation of taxicab insurance rates here after J. Balch Moor, superintendent of insurance, said they were among the lowest in the country.

The rates recently have been reduced from $21 to $16 a month, Moor said, and as most of the business is handled by mutual companies, any excess profits will be returned to policyholders in dividends.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Young Wife Is Smitten With Brother-in-Law; Thinks It Mutual; Should She Declare Herself?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Here is the problem in a nutshell: A young wife—charming, attractive and intelligent—has fallen in love with her husband's brother, a young man a few years her senior. He seems to enjoy her company, although she is very reticent to express her true feelings, believing it might have the effect of scaring him away or otherwise repulsing him—because of his loyalty to her husband. She enjoys his company to the extent that she does not wish to do this.

He is likeable, gay and an excellent companion. The two of them have a great deal of fun together. Yet by no word or sign—other than an occasional glance or a mutual laugh over trifles or an accidental touching of hands (which causes breathless suspense in both)—do they show special awareness of each other. The girl is sure that the man is conscious of her feelings and returns it in kind.

This girl's husband adores her and leans on her strength. Both his family and hers would ostracize the girl and her brother-in-law if the situation came to a head. The husband would probably curl up and die. The girl's question is this: Should she tell her husband's brother how she feels? She feels that he will eventually learn the truth anyway, if she continues to be thrown into his company.

She has been married five years and has no children—through no fault of hers; and nothing other than a few household possessions and some cherished memories of earlier days in marriage when making a home and having children were her fondest hopes. During the past year, she has been attracted to quite a few men; some of whom have made love to her and to one of whom she responded, although not to a compromising degree. Deep in her heart, however, she is sure that her husband's brother is the one man in the world for her and she knows, too—call it woman's intuition or what you wish—that he feels the same. What can I do—since that woman is myself? UNCERTAIN WIFE.

The Amative Woman

DEAR UNCERTAIN WIFE: In other words, how make sure of the bird in the bush before relinquishing the bird in the hand? Well—if I may mix metaphors in mid-sentence—I should say that the bird in the bush, in this instance, has "forbidden fruit" written all over him. I do not believe that he would betray his brother (befoul his own nest) to the extent of taking his place, in the guise of either lover or husband. I think you would be asking for—and would receive—a most devastatingly humiliating rebuke (direct or indirect) from him, in laying aside reticence to confess the nature of your interest in, and expectations of, him.

He may be quite as infatuated with you, for the moment, as you wishfully think him to be; but don't overlook the fact that the average man's involuntary emotional reflexes toward a flagrantly amative woman are not to be construed as evidence of his suppressed desire, or secret intent, to marry her. Once a woman becomes sexually aware of a given man's special attractiveness for her, it is virtually impossible for him not to respond, at least to the extent (as in this case) of signaling an answering awareness of her state of mind; always assuming, of course, that the circumstances of their lives throw them frequently together. But his interest is definitely secondary to hers, and may be evaluated as having about the same intensity and authenticity as the light which is cast by a reflector. If her intense preoccupation with him were to be withdrawn, his answering interest would automatically evaporate.

The real question posed by your situation, as described, is not whether to make brash overtures to your brother-in-law (which heaven forbid!) but how to correct your emotional morbidity; that psychic or functional imbalance which is prompting you to angle for the attentions of the male sex, generally. One gathers that your marriage leaves you emotionally unsatisfied—but whether that is your fault or your husband's remains to be discovered. Whatever is amiss, it is not to be remedied by such poultices as changing love-partners, willy-nilly. It can only be remedied by making a thorough diagnosis of the whole situation, with the aid of an expert analyst in psychological processes and social relationships; and by adopting the prescription that fits the case.

One might have been more inclined to accept your theory that your unethical attachment to your brother-in-law was the so-called love of a lifetime, if that attachment hadn't developed as the tag end of a year's scrutiny and sampling of the stag line. According to your own story, however, you are simply an emotionally unsatisfied woman, ripe for exploitation at the hands of any personable and callous philanderer, and greatly in danger of making an awful fool of yourself—unless you take yourself in hand and get sound advice in time. I strongly urge you to see a diagnostician or psychiatrist; and to take him into your confidence in complete detail. You are heading for the rocks in dallying with your brother-in-law. M. H.

Shock to Mother Does Not Mark Unborn Baby

WE HAVE HAD a stream of books lately about doctors and their lives. It has remained for a California doctor, who took the specialty of obstetrics and gynecology, to write one of the most interesting, to-wit: "Consultation Room," by Frederick Loomis, M. D. (Alfred A. Knopf, New York.)

The doctor is a born story teller and has had a wonderful series of experiences.

He explains the different popular fallacies, such as the marking of babies. "It is as futile to attempt to explain a birthmark or to argue about it with many of the older generation, and not a few of the younger, as it always has been to argue about religion. In fact, religion and the weight of biblical authority often enter into the discussion of this question. The story in Genesis of Jacob's striped kine is quoted as conclusive.

Can't Be Sure

"No one is any longer quite secure in saying that anything can't be done, but we know of no possible mechanism by which an impression received by an expectant mother through any of her five senses can be conveyed to or reproduced in her baby. There is no nervous connection between the two, and the mother's blood, contrary to general belief, never enters the baby's body nor in normal conditions even touches it. The mother's blood and that of her baby are totally different in appearance under the microscope and neither could survive with the blood of the other.

"The usual and probably correct explanation of a fancied connection between a birthmark and an incident in the mother's life while she was carrying her baby is that it is a coincidence only.

"Holy Babies"

"There are many stories of deliberate attempts to mark babies, especially in the days of religious fervor, and women are said to have had the sign of the cross burned on their bodies so that they might have 'holy babies' so marked. But there is no record so far as I know that anyone ever succeeded."

Printed Town Ensemble

Although spring has been officially recognized and hoards of fashion-hungry women have outfitted themselves for Easter, there are many in search of those indispensable printed crepe frocks. Unusual and flattering prints are always hard to find, but the one above seems to know all the answers. It is in crisp dark green, speckled all over with geometric designs in gleaming white. The pleated frock is topped by its own jacket, which is bound in military braid. This ensemble, designed for immediate and constant town wear, is worn with a Japonica straw sailor and cinnamon-brown accessories. This colorful outfit was seen at a recent fashion show at the Shoreham Hotel.

New York Policemen to Extend Glad Hand And Courtesy to World's Fair Visitors; New 'Richest Girl' Has Been Discovered

New York, April 3.

LEWIS VALENTINE, our boss cop, got up on his hind legs a few days ago and made a speech to 6,000 of his vassals. "Go easy on World's Fair visitors from other States," was the burden of his discourse.

ALICE HUGHES

"Please don't send them home with a bad taste in their mouths because they were bawled out, given a summons or arrested for violation of traffic rules new to them," said the commissioner.

Visitors to our show will find that local policemen are an initial contact with our fair-enough city. They will have considerable social chitchat with the local flatfeet through asking them directions or questions, and I am pretty sure they will find that the force is a fine body of blokes. When not actually at the fair, visitors will spend most of their time in the center of town, prowling about the theatrical districts or the famous shopping district along Fifth and Madison avenues. Whatever the rest of the country may think, we are not completely saps, and neither are the gents who run our police force.

With great care they put only our youngest and handsomest coppers to patrolling these zones most highly favored by callers from out of town. Elderly gendarmes, or those with protruding fronts, are sent to duty in outlying sections of the city where they will be safe from visiting eyes. The newest and best-looking rookies are often made members of what is called the Midtown Squad, which is sometimes derisively dubbed "the Courtesy Squad" by other members of the department. These Adonises are the ones who tell you where to go, who help dear old ladies across crowded streets and perform other useful and ornamental functions. And they are the lads that you will see and talk to before going out to the Fair Grounds. As a result, you may go home thinking that New York cops form one of the handsomest and most courteous bodies of men that ever got fallen arches. And though I have my share of run-ins with traffic cops, you won't be far wrong.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: There is always a lot of newspaper talk about the Doris Dukes and Barbara Huttons as "richest girls in the world," but the truth is that the real bearer of this title is Helen Clay Frick, now nearing 50 and by all odds our wealthiest bachelor girl. This daughter of the rich spends most of her time supervising the art collection left to the city by her late father, and very rarely goes out socially. I often wonder just how many European titles made a set at Miss Frick in the good old days. Whatever the case, she fought them all off, and at the half-century mark remains in a state of single cussedness.

Your Figure, Madame!

50 Pounds Gained Overnight Would Really Cause Worry

WHAT IF you were to wake up some morning and find yourself 50 pounds heavier? What a catastrophe that would be! You would imagine all sorts of things, mainly that your glands, which you don't trust anyway, had gone completely haywire! You wouldn't be able to get down to the doctor fast enough and you would do exactly as he told you, no matter how hard it might be. You would do anything to get back to normal weight!

Such a sudden weight change would be enough in itself to shock you into realizing what it had done to your figure. Besides, you would have a very vivid recollection from no further back than yesterday of what it meant to be beautifully slim!

You Gain Too Slowly

But the trouble with overweight is that you do not gain it fast enough! You do not take on 40 to 50 pounds overnight or suddenly graduate into a size 20 frock. The pounds creep up. First you lapse into a size 16, then to an 18, and it may be a year or so before you take a 20.

You get used to anything if it happens gradually enough, and weight and measurement changes usually take place so slowly that they almost seem natural. As a consequence, you may weigh half a hundred pounds too much without worrying about it.

But why not do something about it? If it had all been gained overnight, you would do plenty, and the effect on your figure is exactly the same as if you had gained it all at once.

There is nothing phenomenal about the cause of progressive overweight. It is merely the result of continual overeating. And there is nothing very exciting about the approved method for taking weight off. It simply consists in undereating of the high caloric foods and eating a normal amount of the high vitamin foods. That is all there is to it.

Can Reduce Rapidly

In your case, you must check up to see which foods you are prone to eat to excess. Individuals vary, but whether you have the habit of taking too many desserts, or whether you can put 1,000 extra calories a week down to those bridge luncheons or pot-luck suppers, is something you will have to discover for yourself. It is ridiculously easy to eat 1,000 extra calories a week and on that number you can expect to gain one pound a month, 12 a year. Maybe you've already exceeded such expectations! At any rate, to keep from gaining any more and to give your diet a chance, your sweet tooth and social calories must be taken into account.

You are not likely to overeat of the foods you must have, such as lean meat, vegetables, salads, eggs and skim milk. This list must comprise the main part of your menus.

There is one good thing about all this: You can take weight off much more rapidly than you put it on, and in a surprisingly short time you can have a lovely figure again.

Science in Hair-Rinses

Hollywood, Calif.—Miriam Hopkins, whose naturally curly blonde locks make her one of the most distinctive beauties in town, considers the temperature of her last hair rinse important. For a very curly coiffure she recommends lukewarm water. For straighter locks, very cold water. The cold rinse should not immediately follow a warm water immersion, but should be reached by progressively cooler rinses.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay.

Mrs. DeGoofey Returns

BACK from her sojourn at the San Francisco World's Fair, Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, founder and president of the Do Something About It League, yesterday announced several new projects.

Mrs. De Goofey

"First, I am going to do something drastic about Easter greeting cards," she declared emphatically. It was easy to see that the famous reformer was nettled. With firmly compressed lips, she pulled several handsomely embossed cards from her handbag. "Look at that!" she exclaimed. "And that! Will you tell me why if I wish to send an Easter greeting to a friend, I have to include a lot of love and kisses? Or why I have to poach on the clergy's preserves by sending a sermon?"

"I thought you were opposed to the sending of greeting cards, Mrs. DeGoofey," broke in a reporter.

"I am. But unfortunately a lot of persons I don't know or had forgotten existed sent me Christmas cards. I had intended to even the score by sending them some inexpensive—and I had hoped, inoffensive—Easter cards. But I have searched the town over to find one that looked like anything on the outside and did not contain a lot of mush on the inside.

"I suppose, of course, writers of greeting card verse have to live, but I am in favor of having them transferred to the WPA pay rolls and passing a law requiring that all greeting cards bear just two words, 'Season's Greeting.' Either that or have some literary censorship of the tripe that is allowed to hide behind the hearts and flowers."

The Guest Proof Guest Room

"Not to change the subject, Mrs. DeGoofey," spoke up an inquirer, "but how did you enjoy the World's Fair in San Francisco?"

"It was colossal! But the greatest value of my trip was in picking up some ideas to apply in my major summer project here, which, as you know, is to safeguard Washington housewives from summer visitors en route to New York.

"As a guest in the home of friends, I discovered several simple means of making guest rooms proof against long tenancy. Here are a few that I would like to pass along to Washington women:

"Keep the family apparel, especially that of the man of the house, in the guest room closet and slip in frequently at inopportune times to get needed garments. Do not have more than two empty hangers in the closet and have the bottom full of old shoes, packages of letters and discarded radio sets.

"See that the guest room is devoid of clothes brush, scissors, sewing utensils, pen, pencil or stationery.

"Be sure that at least one guest-room window either won't go up or down. A window shade that won't pull down without falling is another subtle aid.

"A dead bulb in the reading lamp is a good idea. If that seems too extreme, get a 20-watt one.

"For reading matter have some six-month-old copies of Time and possibly a few books. I am now drawing up a suggested library for guest rooms. My list to date includes 'Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm,' 'History of Woman's Suffrage,' 'Under Two Flags,' 'Sermons of Henry Ward Beecher,' 'How to Raise Chickens for Profit.'

Bathrooms Should Be Communistic

"Finally, see that your bathroom is guest proof for the summer. Take off its lock. A bathroom that will lock or bolt is too great a temptation to guests to stay on indefinitely unless, of course, they happen to be nudists.

"Move your medicine chest to the basement and be sure there is no bicarbonate of soda or drinking glass left behind. Finally, fill your towel racks with small, slick, elaborately embroidered guest towels that have been stored in the bottom of your trunk."

"Will you devote your summer exclusively to the World's Fair situation?" Mrs. DeGoofey was asked.

"No, indeed. I expect to launch several projects soon. I want to do something about May queens, buffet suppers, garden pilgrimages, public weddings, and—well, I may even do something about women's hats."

"By the way, Mrs. DeGoofey, have you bought your Easter hat yet?"

"Yes, indeed. I have a little shepherdess model with a veil that ties under the chin."

"Would you call it—er—extreme?" Mrs. DoGoofey."

Start of Spring Rock Gardens

A LOVELY triple-pool nestling at the foot of a rock garden slope—what a charming "landscaped" look it gives your lawn!

But all you need to make such a pool is three little waterproof containers—tubs, half barrels or the ready-made metal pools. Sink them in the ground in a triangle pattern or in any arrangement you like.

Half fill each tub with soil and add a half inch of sand, as the diagram shows. Then fill each tub to the brim with water.

Now you're ready to start your water lillies. Best to choose for small pools the charming pigmy variety—which has blooms of deep red, sunny yellow or waxy white. Allow one plant to a tub, start them easily by pressing a section of rootstock or tuber into the mud till covered. Complete the picture with water hyacinths, which float lazily on the surface, and other graceful aquatic plants.

A beautiful setting for your pool? Weather rocks make a delightful, natural-looking border. Plants? Choose the moisture-loving kind, an umbrella palm for the tiny triangle between pools, gay clusters of marsh marigold, fountain grass and marsh iris for the rocky borders.

Make-Up Pencils Aid to Beauty

Hollywood, Calif.—"Pencils for Perfection" is the unusual make-up slogan of Geraldine Fitzgerald movie actress. On her dressing tables are pencils in red, white, blue, green, purple, black and brown.

The red pencil is for outlining lips. The white one is moistened and run under nail tips. The blue pencil is used for a short line at the outer edges of her eyes when she wears blue in the evening; the green is for green clothes; and purple complements violet-toned ensembles. The black pencil accents a perfect hairline and the brown is for eyebrows.

Navy Blue Vogue

New York, (AP).—Navy blue is one of the leading colors on the spring fashion palette. Rich medium blues and greenish sea blues are included. Another interesting range runs from beige through ginger and rust to henna. Dark green was launched by Molyneux in Paris to replace black and some gray is also shown.

Usual Lenten Lull Forgotten As Notables Arrive in Town

By Hope Ridings Miller

The Post Society Editor.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS, flocking to town to see their friends and the cherry blossoms, are being feted right and left. The Lenten lull that has blanketed the Capital's social scene in past years has been scarcely noticeable this season, and now it looks as if the final days before Easter will set a record high in partying.

HOPE R. MILLER

After all, Lent or no Lent, when top-flight out-of-towners come to Washington, they must be entertained; and ever since Sir Harold and Lady Wernher have been in this country, their visit to the Capital has been eagerly anticipated by a number of our residents.

Accompanied by their daughter, Miss Georgiana W. Wernher, Sir Harold and Lady Wernher arrived in Washington recently from Palm Beach and are at the Shoreham Hotel. They will leave today for New York, sailing from there Friday for their home, Someries House, Regent's Park, London.

Last evening, the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, entertained at a dinner in honor of the Wernhers, whom he has known for several years. Others in the company were Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley, Senator and Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve System; V. A. L. Mallet, Counselor of the British Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Pierrepont Moffat, Mrs. John Hay ("Jock") Whitney and Harry Worcester Smith, of the Virginia hunting country; Joseph Alsop, Count Alfred Potocki, brother of the Ambassador; Miss Georgiana Wernher and Janusz Zoltowski, Financial Counselor of the Polish Embassy.

Lady Wernher—her full title is Lady Anastasia Michailovna, but her friend call her Zia—is Russian born, the daughter of the late Grand Duke Michael of Russia and Countess de Torby. Sir Harold is the son of Lady Ludlow of London.

Rumanian Envoy Fetes Visitors

Prof. Dimitrie Gusti, Minister of state and commissioner general of Rumania to the New York World's Fair, and Mme. Gusti were guests of honor at a dinner given last evening by the Rumanian Minister and Mme. Irimescu at the Legation on Twenty-third street.

Arriving in Washington Saturday, Prof. Gusti has done a bit of sight-seeing not on schedule for the average visitor to these parts. Sunday afternoon he accompanied Secretary of Agriculture Wallace on a trip to the housing development at Greenbelt, Md. Prof. Gusti is particularly interested in this phase of government activity as he has been in charge of rural housing in his country.

Guests at the dinner for Prof. and Mme. Gusti were Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Senator and Mrs. Alva Adams, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom, Mr. and Mrs. Loy W. Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Warner, George Duca, Emmanuel Dimitriu and Mme. Dimitriu, of the Rumanian Legation.

Prof. and Mme. Gusti will leave Washington today to return to New York, where they will stay for some time before returning to their home in Bucharest.

Gertrude Lawrence Arrives "For Rest"

Although she is not officially scheduled to be here until next week, when she will appear in a play at the National Theater, Miss Gertrude Lawrence, noted actress, arrived in Washington early (3 a. m., to be exact) yesterday, and will be at the Shoreham through this week and next.

She frankly admits it was the cherry blossoms that brought her on early, but she hopes to get in some rest, some golf and a bit of friend-seeing in the next few days. Yesterday afternoon she was out at a local golf course, knocking the balls about for all they were worth. Although she has a number of golf-playing friends here, any of which would have been glad to make the rounds with her, she preferred to go alone and get in some practice, as she hasn't played in months.

Miss Lawrence motored straight to Washington from Toronto, leaving there Saturday at the close of a week's engagement, and with her chauffeur and her West Highland terrier, Mac, drove through without a stop-over. Her maid and secretary are having a week's vacation, too. But chances are, before the next few days roll by, she will be needing both of them; for Capital residents who like nothing more than a British-born stage celebrity will be showering Miss Lawrence with invitations as long as she stays here, and if her telephone stops ringing as much as an hour while she's in town—I'll miss my guess.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Yesterday's mail brought to a number of Washington notables huge white envelopes bearing formal invitations to the official opening of the New York World's Fair on Sunday afternoon, April 30 at 2 o'clock. . . . Mrs. Breckinridge Long will entertain at luncheon on Tuesday, April 11. . . . Mrs. Edward B. Clark has cards out for a similar event on Thursday, April 20, at the Army and Navy Club. . . . Representative and Mrs. William D. Van Devanter Saturday afternoon in his home in Alexandria.

Justice Stone Joins Guests At Wife's Tea

Guests calling on Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone yesterday afternoon, at her regular Monday "at home," had an unexpected treat. Justice Stone came in for a cup of tea and lingered to talk with the sizeable group that had assembled during the late afternoon.

The tea table was set in the spacious living room of the Stone home on Wyoming avenue, which is always the scene of an informal tea-time gathernig on Monday afternoons during the season. Big vases of amaryllis and roses decorated the room. The hostess was gowned in a floor-length frock fashioned with a bottle green crepe skirt and a blouse of gold lame, shot with green threads.

Justice and Mrs. Stone, who are planning to spend Easter in Washington, will be joined on Thursday by their son, Laurson H. Stone, of New York, who will bring some friends to spend the week-end, some time of which will be devoted to cherry blossom sight-seeing.

Foreigners Open San Francisco Fair Exhibits in Exhilarating Fashion

IF the foreigners open their pavilions at the New York World's Fair in as exhilarating a fashion as some of them are doing at the San Francisco exhibition, every Washingtonian invited will go up post haste for the event. Our Capital spy at the Golden Gate Fair writes that at the recent opening of the Brazilian pavilion, 520 bottles of champagne were uncorked amid much merrymaking.

Our correspondent says that Brazil's entry is the most beautiful building on Treasure Island. Designed by a leading California architect, it is modern in feeling with colorful murals showing the history of the South American republic.

Socially prominent San Franciscan women take turns several times a week serving tea to distinguished visitors at the Pacific House, where there is a library stuffed with volumes about all countries which border on the Pacific. There is a lecture hall which Mlle. Eve Curie, who's scheduled to come to Washington later this month, filled to capacity when she spoke. Murals in the Pacific House are by Coverrubias, the famous Mexican painter whose recent book on Bali was a best seller.

SAID correspondent postscripts that the funds for the Chinese pavilion were raised by the residents of San Francisco's Chinatown, the Government being occupied with more vital matters at the moment. The Czech exhibit is housed in one of the United States Government buildings and is still being shown.

AT A small week-end cocktail party given by a charming Georgetown hostess: the Counselor of the Swedish Legation, Folke Wennerberg, arriving after an all-day golf match, accompanied by pretty Mme. Wennerberg . . . Mr. and Mrs. Selden Chapin and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Achilles from State Department ranks . . . the Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Richard Patterson, who golfs every Sunday, rain or shine, accompanied by Mrs. Patterson, who wore a black redingote over a spring print.

If you're not horsey, better not admit it during the next few weeks, when every week-end brings half a dozen hunter trials or steeplechases. At the trials of the Potomac Hunt on Saturday the judges will be Maj. Gen. John Herr, chief of Cavalry; Dr. Archibald Cary Randolph, M. F. H. of the Piedmont Hounds, and Harvey Ladew, master of the Elridge-Harford Hunt of Harford County, Md. Afterward a tea will be held at Freer's Farm for members of the hunt and exhibitors.

Modelling Mrs. Gerald Linke's Hobby

Looking Glamorous For Camera, She Finds Serious Job

Among the members of society who are currently proving that they can toil and spin at the same time, with very satisfactory results, is Washington's own Mrs. Gerald D. Linke, wife of Lieut. Comdr. Linke.

Now in New York, where she is spending this season modeling for John Powers, the Magnificent, she is expected in town over Easter on one of her regular week-end trips. She is the daughter of Mrs. Robert Bolling Brown, of this city, and the late Mr. Brown. Staying with Mrs. Linke in New York is her young niece, Aleen Stewart Buchanan, a student at the American School of Ballet and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Buchanan, of Washington.

Looking glamorous for the camera is, according to Mrs. Linke, just as much of a serious job as society-warbling in night clubs. And that, according to recent revelations, is a very solemn profession.

Rule One is that the model must always look her best. This means that she has to get plenty of rest, consume the right calories, and wear the right clothes. Nine times out of ten, the right clothes come out of one's own wardrobe—so imagine the tariff on that point alone.

MRS. GERALD LINKE

Mrs. Linke, whom the cameras know as "Carol Carter," studied in Washington at the Chevy Chase School and later at Holy Cross Academy. She also attended the University of Brussels, where she majored in French; and she is a member of the Junior League.

Her first venture into modeling was the outcome of a dare, and at the time, Mrs. Linke considered it no more than a lark. Her husband was then stationed at the Navy Yard in Philadelphia and they had as their house guest a former schoolmate of Mrs. Linke. The two young women decided they would get jobs modeling just to find out what "people would say." People did talk—pleasantly and approvingly—so now Mrs. Linke is just concluding her first camera year in New York.

D. C. Women's League Indorses Kepecs Plan

Voteless Voters Oppose Any Immediate Change in Operation of National Training School for Girls

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Spurred by a report that a major addition, tentatively made by the House sub-committee of District appropriations to the 1940 budget, and approved by President Roosevelt, proposes a building to replace the National Training School for Girls on Conduit road, the child welfare department of the District of Columbia Voteless League of Women Voters yesterday passed a resolution opposing any immediate change in the operation of the institution.

The resolution, and a statement defining the league's stand, followed a discussion of the Jacob Kepecs' report on child welfare services in the District, at a luncheon meeting in the Y. W. C. A., held jointly with the child welfare committee of the Council of Social Agencies. The resolution asked "that no immediate change be made in the operation of the National Training School for Girls and that the principles of the Kepecs child welfare program be adhered to as quoted from his report:

"Any permanent plan for the National Training School for Girls appears to be premature at this time. . . . The ultimate solution for the school is closely related to the development of adequate case work service. . . . The future development of the institution as to capacity, character and program will depend upon the strength and adequacy of the protective and foster home care services."

Child Welfare Program First Need

The league's statement points out that Mr. Kepecs definitely recommends that no change be made in the location or physical equipment of the National Training School for Girls until a modernized child welfare program has been adopted by the District.

"This report has been officially approved by the Child Welfare Review Advisory Committee and by the Board of Public Welfare, and its adoption advocated by those intimately connected with local child welfare agencies.

"So far as is known, no individual or department in testifying before the sub-committee on appropriations asked that an appropriation be made at this time for a new National Training School for Girls.

"It is our belief that when the President is informed as to the recommendations in recent reports, and as to the will of the citizens, that these recommendations be carried out, he will be in sympathy with the resolution," says the statement.

Urges Use of Report as "Blue Print"

Mrs. Spencer Gordon, chairman of child welfare for the Board of Public Welfare, was the first speaker introduced by Mrs. Howard Leland Smith, who presided. She gave a digest of the Kepecs report. Although she quoted him as saying it should be a guide rather than a blueprint, Mrs. Gordon declared the thorough investigation represented in the report and its specific recommendations qualified it for use as a blueprint.

Elwood Street, director of public welfare, who, with Mrs. Street, attended the luncheon, spoke from the floor and urged as an immediate need the appointment of a general superintendent under whom the services would be unified. The citizens advisory committee was carefully selected and participated actively in the report, he added.

Mrs. William Hurd Hill, chairman of the board of Children's Protective Association, pointed out, in line with the report, that the cheapest kind of child care as well as the best for him, is that in his own home. She stressed the needs for development of a housekeeper service.

Others who spoke were Miss Genevieve Gebower, of the Juvenile Court; Mrs. Aileen Burton, of the Child Guidance Clinic, and Morris Klass, of the Jewish Social Service. Mr. Klass pointed out that an expenditure equal to that called for in the Kepecs recommendations is not being made in hospitalization and institutional care of adults who are the result of neglect in childhood and that children's services would mean a saving of money as well as of human beings.

G. O. P. Women Hear Kunkel

Tracing the history of democratic government in a talk before the League of Republican Women yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel, Representative John Kunkel, of Pennsylvania, asserted there was no reason to criticize either the executive or the legislative branch for seeking power, but much reason to criticize the legislative branch for turning its power over to the executive.

Leaving out personalities, Representative Kunkel pointed to the danger of unrestricted governmental control. Since the Magna Charta in England, there has been contention between the executive and legislative branches of government in Great Britain, he said, and seeing how this served as a check and balance, the founders of the United States provided similar institutions here.

Irrespective of who is in the White House, it is natural for the executive to seek additional power and not unconstitutional that he should do so, Representative Kunkel said, but on the other hand, it is the duty of Congress to hold firmly to every iota of power it has and to strive to regain what it has relinquished.

Preceding the monthly program, the annual meeting of the league was held. Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, the president, made her report. Others were made by Mrs. William H. Scott, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William Morton Grinnell, treasurer; Mrs. Howard S. LeRoy, chairman of the house committee; Mrs. Edson W. Briggs, publicity; Mrs. George Madden Grimes, who was chairman of the recent banquet; Mrs. James G. Wentz, chairman of program, and Mme. Cantacuzene, chairman of constitution and by-laws.

A.A.U.W. Urged To Lift Level Of Hospitals

Active lay interest is essential for development of higher educational standards in the nursing profession and for lifting the level of hospitals, Mrs. Chester Bolton told members of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Bolton established the first endowed university school of nursing at Western Reserve, in Cleveland and was also instrumental in establishing the Army nurses' school during the World War, which now is much reduced but at any time could be expanded. Miss Bertha Nienburg, chairman of the committee on the economic and legal status of women, was in charge of program.

The lay group should have an understanding of nursing procedure in the city and also of the kind of training now being given, said Mrs. Bolton, and it is always necessary to convince professional people that a lay group is sincere in desire to co-operate with them. The layman, she added, should see that the entrance requirements for nurses' training schools really mean something and that the co-operation of preparatory schools be secured.

Dr. Phoebe Crittenden was hostess for the tea and was assisted by Miss Cordelia Cowan, executive secretary of the Nurses' Board of Examiners; Mrs. John Bruce Handy, Miss Edith Mary Haydon, Mrs. Paul Henderson, Mrs. Mary A. Pen Women Sell Clubhouse Site Purchased in 1929

Prospect Street Property Now Not Considered Suitable; Proceeds of Sale to Be New Fund Nucleus

The former home of Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth, the novelist, located at Thirty-sixth and Prospect street, and purchased by the National League of American Pen Women in 1929 as a site for a clubhouse, was sold by the league yesterday. Neither the house, which has been occupied by tenants for the last ten years, nor its location, was now deemed suitable for the league's clubhouse. The proceeds from the sale will be the nucleus of a fund for another clubhouse.

Mrs. Audrey Wurdemann Auslander, president of the league, who now resides in Washington, presided at the meeting. She has been away much of the season, on lecture tours wiht her husband, Joseph Auslander, poetry consultant at the Library of Congress. Board members from out of the city who attended included Mrs. Florence Hamilton, of New York, editor of the Bulletin; Mrs. Mae West Owen, of Denver; Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton, of Greenwich, Conn.; Mrs Marion Taft.

Luncheon Follows Meeting

Other members of the board present were Mrs. Leila Pier King, Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, president of the D. C. Branch of the league; Mrs. Mae Futrelle, Mrs. Matilda Kolb Bartlett, Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, Miss Clara Manderchied, Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, Margie H. Luckett, Mrs. Nell V. Smith, Mrs. Claudia Rice Scott, and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas.

Mrs. Cajigas, national hospitality chairman, was in charge of a luncheon, following the meeting, in the dining room of the hotel. The program was opened with a verse read by Mrs. Auslander from her "Testament of Love." Following her, Mrs. Cajigas introduced Mrs. Steon, former national president of the league and a world-famed explorer and author; Mrs. Tyler, editor of "The Blue Moon" poetry magazine and herself a poet, who read three brief poems dedicated to her daughter; Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, a past national president; Mrs. Hamilton, who had left New York at midnight Sunday and driven all night to be here in time for the board meeting, and Mrs. Owen, who spoke briefly on beauties of the West.

Mrs. Tiller Recites

Mrs. Theodore Tiller, of the Washington branch, had written amusing little verses about each of the board members, which were read at the close of the luncheon program. Other league members present were Mrs. Charles Wright, Mrs. Elsie Bennett, Mrs. Mabel Pittle, the secretary.

Guests included Mme. Ricardo Alfaro, wife of the former President of Panama; Miss Elizabeth Peet, dean of Gallaudet College; Mrs. A. S. Shah, Mrs. Clinton Tribbey, Mrs. George Tribble, Mrs. E. Flavelle Koss, Mrs. Ethel P. Clancey and Mrs. H. W. Lawson, all of whom were Mrs. Cajigas' guests; Mrs. William L. Bruckart, a guest of Mrs. Bennett, and Mrs. Stanley Van Brunt; Mrs. Joseph A. Herbert, jr., and Mrs. David Crawford, guests of Mrs. Wright.

Last night some of the national officers were present for the gentlemen's evening and reception to new members, held by the District League at its studio in the Grafton Hotel. Margaret Blish, dramatic reader, and Wilhelmina S. Walters, vocal soloist, were the artists of the occasion.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Carpenter have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jean Carpenter, to Arthur K. Stellhorn, son of the Rev. and Mrs. E. C. Stellhorn, of Ann Arbor, Mich. No date has been set for the wedding.

Make Your Hallway Hospitable says "Mary Annette," Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.

Many a welcome on the mat is quickly obliterated once the door opens and you enter a cold, forbidding-looking hallway. And people can't help feeling this. For years hallways have been treated like step-children, when just a very little money, and a little time, could convert them into what they should be . . . a sort of inviting preface to the hospitality you want your home to reflect. A mirror on one wall is not only a convenience to your guests, but, if some well-chosen pictures are used on the wall opposite, it also creates an illusion of width as well. Large halls should contain a table and a chair or settee . . . the latter not built for lounging, but more as a place of waiting. Many of the smartest hallways these days are covered in bright solid linoleum, with a decorative inlaid design in the center . . . lending color and proving exceedingly practical as well.

Consult "Mary Annette" or any of our other decorators, at any time without charge or obligation whatsoever; or, if you prefer an appointment, call National 5100, Br. 500.

Nazi Coup Fear May Aid U.S. In Argentina

German Merchants May Lose Trade Because of Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, April 3.—The government inquiry into Nazism in Argentina caused growing anxiety today among German merchants who feared an anti-Nazi wave now would halt abruptly their drive to replace the United States as the nation's second largest trader.

One merchant said if it was proved German officials participated in a purported Nazi movement for colonization or annexation of Argentina's Patagonia, it likely would "retard our commercial gains here by a dozen years."

(The investigation developed only a week after Argentina announced a barter trade agreement with Germany, under which Argentina would exchange 100,000 tons of surplus wheat and 8,000 tons of wool for 900 railway cars and 60 locomotives.

(Some observers predicted at the time that Germany soon might replace the United States as the second largest exporter to the Argentine and might even threaten the long-time leadership of Great Britain.)

Five government agencies were conducting the inquiry into the alleged German designs on Patagonia, 257,058 square miles of potentially rich plateau in southern Argentina.

The German Embassy yesterday denied Germany had any idea of annexing Argentine territory or had "aggressive intentions" against Argentina.

Leading German merchants were questions today regarding the intermingling of commercial and political activities.

All phases of the investigation were co-ordinated under the direction of Federal Judge Miguel Jantus, who took charge under a law requiring him to intervene in any case in which Argentine sovereignty might be involved.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

FBI Reveals D. C. Activity Of Nazi Unit

social outings were held there was a target contest."

After the District organization disbanded a Deutsche-Konsum Verband group was formed for the purpose of combating boycott activities against "made in Germany" goods. This group folded up, however, in about two months.

Barthelmess, a German immigrant who came to Takoma Park, Md., in 1923, joined the German-American Bund, according to the report. He was quoted by the F. B. I. as saying, however, that no other members of the local organization joined the bund.

Organized Here in 1933

Local activity, according to the report, started in October or November, 1933 with the organization of the "Kameradscaft Bund." Regular weekly meetings were held at a hall at 1212 G street northwest. In June, 1934, the group joined the Friends of the New Germany.

The avowed object was to discuss German problems, to "combat hostile propaganda," and to offset anti-German boycott activities.

The uniform worn by the local storm troopers was different from that worn by Bund troopers. Purpose of the latter is to "protect meetings of the Bund from assaults by Communists." They wear black trousers, gray shirts, black necktie, Sam Brown belt, black overseas cap with white piping, gray coat with black collar, white piped black shoulder straps and cuffs with white piping. On the left arm is worn a band with a swastika emblem.

One of the special objects of the Bund, the F. B. I. said, is the spreading of anti-Jewish propaganda. In addition, the Bund attempts to carry on an anti-Jewish boycott "through a distribution of trading stamps."

Each Bund local attempts to foster a youth movement for the purpose of inoculating "our boys and girls" with Nazi doctrines so that "they shall be confirmed and strengthened in National Socialism" and will be "conscious of the role which has been assigned to them as the future carriers of German racial ideals in America." Children are taught that Satan is the Jewish God.

Youths Shout "Heil Hitler"

Camps are maintained for German-American youth. "Heil Hitler" shouts and the Nazi salute help to create authentic Nazi atmosphere. A booklet used in connection with the opening of Camp Nordland at Andover, N. J., in 1937, asserts that "our camp is designed principally to be a place which breathes of the spirit of the new Germany."

The camp was consecrated as "a little piece of German soil in America." Another excerpt says: "We also want to be helpers and advisers who are ready at all times to do any work, to provide for order and to make propaganda for the ideals of our great German racial community."

"Local leaders," the FBI said, "in instances refused to provide names of officers and other data essential to this inquiry."

Whenever this occurred, G-men went to Kuhn to try to get the information, but Kuhn refused, saying the local leader doubtless had some good reason for withholding it.

The FBI said it had reports from highly confidential sources to the effect that Kuhn was regarded as the "black sheep" of a family of substantial citizens of Munich, Bavaria. Kuhn has a brother, according to this information, who is a prosecuting attorney in Munich, the report said.

When interviewed, Kuhn said that when he visited Germany some years ago with 400 Bund members, Reichsfuehrer Hitler discussed with him the question whether the coming Olympic games would improve German-American relations.

Bund activity, the FBI said, is confined largely to the East. The bund has divided the United States into three departments. Kuhn's estimate of membership in each department was greater than estimates from local leaders, but membership in the Western department was estimated by the latter at 542 as compared with Kuhn's estimate of 1,005.

Character Among Aims Of Education

Dr. Ballou Calls For Revival of Things Spiritual In Lafayette Talk

The function of education is not merely to impart knowledge but to build children's character, prepare them to earn their living, and teach them the ideals of citizenship, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, said last night.

He called for a "revival and rejuvenation of things spiritual as well as things pertaining to citizenship" in an address before 175 members of the Lafayette Home and School Association in the Lafayette School. While the influence of home and church has decreased in recent years, he said, cuts in school appropriations have tended to reduce the influence of schools as well.

Character is formed not alone by school and home influences, he said, but by outside forces such as the radio and the movies, which have a "tremendous influence." "An attitude can be developed in an hour's movie which will take five or ten times that long to overcome by systematic school influence," he added.

Dr. Ballou was introduced by McClain B. Smith, president of the association.

Dupont Circle

The Dupont Circle Citizens Association yesterday afternoon heard a talk on "Fire Hazards" by Stephen T. Porter, chief engineer of the Fire Department, at a meting in the Mayflower Hotel. Dr. Harry A. Garfield reported that sample trash containers sent from New York City had been placed on trial at several points in the area.

A committee was appointed to appear before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board on April 14 to oppose the application of the Hi-Ho Club, on Connecticut avenue at Q street northwest, for a liquor license. The committee was composed of Harral Mulliken, W. Herbert Gill and Mrs. William Barrett Ridgely.

The following officers were nominated for re-election: Woodson P. Houghton, president; William Floyd Crosby and Dr. Garfield, vice presidents; Rowland S. Marshall, secretary; W. Herbert Gill, treasurer; Mullikin and Miss Lelia Peachy, executive committee.

Manor Park Citizens

General support of the citizens for a District income tax was reflected by the delegates to the last meeting of the Federation of Citizens Associations, A. M. Edwards, chairman of the fiscal relations committee of the federation, told the Manor Park Citizens Association last night.

Resolutions were adopted indorsing C. H. Somerville, principal of the Paul Junior High School, as a candidate for the post of principal of the new Calvin Coolidge High School; asking that traffic lights be installed on Georgia avenue at the intersections of Rittenhouse street and Colorado avenue, and urging that permanent repairs be made on the terrace of Paul Junior High School, which frequently is washed out by heavy rains, and the west side of the Whittier School playground, which is apparently disturbed by an underground spring.

Takoma, D. C.

Takoma Park, D. C., Citizens Association decided last night to appeal to the Board of Zoning Adjustments, and if necessary to the courts, in its fight against 15-foot houses in a residential "A" zone.

The group had previously protested to the commissioners, but they had held it was beyond their power to deny permits. A committee was set up at last night's meeting to collect funds for expenses in case a suit is filed.

President Wallace C. Magathan was re-elected for his eighth consecutive term. Other officers elected were: Vice president, Bruce E. Anderson; second vice president, Lewis A. Jones; secretary, William M. Greene; corresponding secretary, Carl C. King; treasurer, Dr. N. E. McIndoo; delegates to the federation, R. H. Fiedler and William M. Greene.

Farmer, 82, Unwilling to Loaf, Finds Winter Work in City

WILLIAM G. HUNTINGTON

Nebraskan Spends Slack Rural Months With D. C. Daughter But Gets Odd Jobs To Keep in Trim for Summer Labors

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

Even the name of William G. Huntington's home town fits him—Liberty.

He is as free as a jackrabbit and about as unpredictable. During a single day he may go from house painting to Chinese checkers to lecturing on the farm problem to reading a book to driving a car to rooting at a baseball game. At the age of 82 he is getting the most fun out of life.

For this interview he had to be coaxed down from a tall stepladder, which he had just begun to ascend preparatory to painting a friend's second-floor porch at 1519 Allison street northwest.

"Oh, well, I guess a few minutes rest won't do me any harm," he said, shaking out his pipe.

Protracted loafing, though, would not be so innocuous, Mr. Huntington believes. He knows because he tried it once, nearly 30 years ago. Deciding to turn his Liberty, Nebr., farm over to his son and give up hard labor, he joined the old codgers at the cracker barrel and at the bandstand in the center of town.

"Ten days of that was more than enough for me," he says. "I began to ache and fidget. So I went back to work and have kept busy ever since."

He's been spending the last 13 winters with his daughter, Mrs. F. G. Harden, 1421 Webster street northwest. In a week or so Mr. Huntington will be leaving for his Nebraska farm and serious work. The odd jobs he does in Washington for friends and neighbors—house painting, repairing, etc.—are just easy conditioners for the hard summer's labors that lie ahead.

Born on a Vermont farm, Mr. Huntington was 13 when his parents moved to Illinois. Subsequently he lived in Kansas and Minnesota before going to Nebraska to make his home 42 years ago. In Minnesota he helped to organize a farmers' mutual insurance company and for nine years was its president. He had been in Liberty only a short time when he founded a home-owned telephone company and headed it for 15 years. Today it is a prospering enterprise, although the original rates of 50 cents, 75 cents and $1 a month have never been raised.

Twice he made political races, both times for the State Legislature. First time on the Populist ticket, then on the Republican. He is a former deputy sheriff, the inventor of a self-feeder for threshing machines and an automobile driver since 1909.

"I've never been out of a job in my life," he says. "I'm as rugged as a bear."

Farmers today, he thinks, must submit to compulsory limitation of production if they want to obviate nuisance surpluses, which mean low prices.

"We farmers," he says, "are too independent for our own good. We're disloyal to our best interests, that's what."

WPA Rate Limit Urged For Relief

Subcommittee Considers Writing Restriction Into D. C. Supply Bill

A limitation of District relief payments to WPA wage scale levels for unskilled workers is being considered by the House sub-committee on District appropriations, it was learned yesterday.

If written into the 1940 District supply bill, the proviso would cut maximum relief payments to $48.20 a month instead of $60, the present limitation per family.

Restriction Urged

Members of the sub-committee have expressed the view that the relief payments which are restricted to unemployables should not exceed the wages paid those on work relief.

The District supply bill will be reported to the House Thursday. It will provide funds for the purchase of additional land at Muirkirk, Md., and for the drafting of plans for buildings to house inmates of the Industrial Home School for Boys and the National Training School for Girls.

Chairman Collins last year proposed that these institutions be put on a single tract of land with plenty of acreage and that the valuable site of the Industrial Home School be sold. At that time it was expected to be absorbed by an expansion of the Naval Observatory grounds.

A reputed appropriation for a new Wilson Teachers' College has been dropped from the bill, it is understood, because of testimony given the sub-committee that the teaching profession is already overcrowded.

Funds for 25 Police

The measure carries funds for 25 additional policemen, most of whom will be assigned to the motor vehicle patrol to assist in the enforcement of traffic regulations.

Four or five of the policemen, however, are to be assigned to the task of keeping check on the sale of liquors and intoxicants to minors.

The District supply bill will be reported to the House and passed the same day, under present plans. The House plans to adjourn over Good Friday.

Porcupines Made Pets to Show It Can Be Done

A Southerner who makes pets of porcupines because nature experts said it couldn't be done was in Washington yesterday with two of his bristly charges. He is A. Dean Lindsay, Ocilla, Ga., traveling with "Rusty" and "Dusty" to show people how readily they take to domestication.

Lindsay debunked the popular belief that porcupines shoot their quills. They won't even raise them, he said, unless they're alarmed or angered and he hasn't yet been punctured.

Fingerprinting Weighed For Liquor Licensees

The Commissioners yesterday asked the Corporation Counsel to study a proposed regulation, recommended by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, to require applicants for liquor licenses to be fingerprinted.

1 Per Cent Sales Tax Urged With Income Levy

Joint Bill Would Solve D. C. Problems, Says Nichols

A retail sales tax of 1 per cent and a personal income tax with moderate rates and exemptions was proposed yesterday by Chairman Nichols, of the House sub-committee on fiscal affairs, as a solution to the District tax muddle.

Nichols suggested that the sales tax proposed in the Pond report might be cut in half and that the income tax provision could be lowered from the $14,000 base to around $4,000 to $5,000.

He admitted that the sub-committee is still far from an agreement as to what revisions should be made in the local revenue bill as a result of the Supreme Court decision upholding reciprocal Federal-State income taxes on Government salaries.

Nichols said that a District income tax would have to grant credits for payments of State income tax by local government employes who maintain legal residences elsewhere. Otherwise, he added, Federal employes' salaries may be subject to triple taxation, i. e., by the District, a State and the Federal Government.

Should the District fail to allow credits for State income taxes paid by local residents, Nichols predicted, many Federal employes would be forced to give up their legal residences and thereby their voting franchise.

Meanwhile, District officials are patching up the business privilege levy for use as a last resort if the sub-committee fails to agree on income and sales taxes.

Spy Alarm False

When the burglar alarm goes off at the home of Lieut. Comdr. Paul H. Bastedo, 3065 Whitehaven street northwest, there is considerable interest in official circles. Commander Bastedo is a Navy intelligence officer and deals in spies and such.

"So sorry," he said, "I opened a window."

Hundreds Here Celebrating Passover, 'Festival of Freedom'

Traditional Seder Services Held in Homes And Synagogues Throughout City; Special Foods Symbolize Hardships of the Exodus

The Festival of Freedom, or as it is more commonly known, Passover, commemorating the exodus of the Jews from Egypt, began at sundown last night with the traditional Seder services at synagogues and in hundreds of homes throughout the city.

Rich in symbolism, the Seder rites in the home officially usher in the eight-day festival. The youngest son of each orthodox family recites four questions concerning the meaning and spirit of Passover.

The head of the family, reading from the "Haggadah," recites the pilgrimage of the Israelites, led by Moses, to the Promised Land. All members of the festal table take part in the service.

Instead of bread, mazzoth is eaten in remembrance of the fleeing Hebrews, who hastily prepared this kind of unleavened food, baked on boards in the sun. Mazzoth will be eaten throughout the eight days.

Special dishes prepared for the Seder service symbolize the hardships which the Children of Israel suffered in Egypt. Despite its connection with the tragedy of Egypt, Passover still retains the character of a spring festival and is celebrated with gladness and song.

Orthodox Jews will repeat the home Seder service tonight. Those of the reformed faith observe only that on the first night.

Beulahites Bring Reinforcements in Battle of Smelts

In an atmosphere thick with mutual misunderstanding rival connoisseurs of North and South Michigan yesterday moved toward a showdawn in their spirited dispute over the tastiness of Escanaba and Beulah-brad smelts.

With 1,800 pounds of smelts now bound for Washington under escort of four Beulah businessmen, George Maines, spokesman for the Beulah faction, yesterday said "those Escanaba people are going to eat our smelts at their own dinner." He charged that "those things they call 'smelts' up in Escanaba haven't even started to run yet."

Representative Fred Bradley, who numbers thousands of smelts among his Upper Peninsula constituents, has issued 250 invitations for an all-Michigan dinner in the Capitol dining rooms Thursday, with Escanaba smelts advertised a the piece de resistance.

Sadur Requests Separate Trial On Tax Charges

Gordon L. R. Sadur, income tax expert for the Warring numbers gang, asked District Court yesterday to save him from the consequences of publicity over the Warring jury-fixing scandal which sent Emmitt Warring, "brains of the outfit," and four others to jail.

Sadur and the three Warrings—Emmitt, Leo Paul and Charles "Ragz"—face a third trial April 24 for conspiring to defraud the Government of income taxes on the Warring racket income. Sadur asked to be allowed a separate trial.

Sadur said he would not be able to have a fair trial if he faced the court beside the Warrings.

With the motion Goldstein filed a thick sheaf of newspaper clippings about the Warring cases.

District Doctors Prepare to Fight Measles Epidemic

Plans for combatting an "impending epidemic" of measles in the District were formulated yesterday by a dozen physicians, representing the District Health Department and medical societies.

Officials said that of 428 measle cases reported since January 1, 331 occurred in March.

Health officials warned that measles is the most easily transmitted of all communicable diseases. They advised parents that the symptoms are similar to those of a cold.

Rutledge Approved As District Judge

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday unanimously approved Wiley Blount Rutledge, dean of the Iowa State University law school, to be a judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, however, reserved the right to oppose the nomination when it comes up on the floor for confirmation.

D.C. Youth Council Asks Inquiry Into Paper Censorship

A special investigation of charges of alleged censorship of the Central Bulletin, Central High School weekly, was ordered last night by the Washington Youth Council.

The articles and editorials alleged to have been suppressed concerned the Marian Anderson case.

The council also asked that funds be appropriated by Congress for the study of higher educational needs in the District. Other action favored passage of the Hull bill to license co-operatives in the District.

Cleanup Weeks Set April 17 to 29

The Commissioners yesterday designated April 17 to April 29 as "Clean-Up Weeks." They said the plan would stimulate business activity and create "new opportunities for employment at a time when many of our citizens are desperately in need of work."

Roosevelt Wins Cadet Drill Cup

Central Finishes Second and Wilson Third; 5,000 See Competition

With the precision of the veteran troops it will follow in Thursday's Army Day parade, Roosevelt High School's Fifth Regiment marched to victory yesterday in the Cadet Corps' annual regimental competition in Central Stadium.

Second place went to the First Regiment of Central High School. The Sixth Regiment, of Woodrow Wilson High, won third place by the narrow margin of a half-point over the Fourth and Second regiments, respectively, of Western and McKinley High School which tied for fourth.

Roosevelt also was victorious in the band competition, with Woodrow Wilson and Western bands second and thid, respectively.

5,000 See Presentations

As about 5,000 persons watched, Assistant Schools Superintendent Thomas W. Gosling presented a gold medal to Cadet Lieut. Col. Blaine Eig, commandant of the winning regiment, after the Army officer-judges announced their decision. Gosling gave a silver cup and a silk regimental flag to Cadet Capt. Richard Bailey, adjutant, who received them on behalf of the regiment.

Also given gold medals by Gosling were Capt. Fred Parvay, leader of the Roosevelt Band, which with its third successive victory won permanent possession of a silver cup, and Maj. Roy Millenson, of Western, commander of the First Battalion of the Fourth Regiment, which last week won the battalion competition.

Richard Bond, captain of Roosevelt Company G, received a bronze medal for third place in the distinguished non-commissioned officers competition last year.

The Col. Wallace M. Craigie Cup, which goes annually to the winning map making problem team was presented to Capt. Philip V. Cardon for the winning Central team.

Army Officers Are Judges

Judging the drill were Lieuts. Oscar G. Kreiser, William S. Humphries and Joseph S. Kujawski, all of the Thirty-fourth Infantry, Fort G. Meade, Md. Assistant leaders of the Army, Navy and Marine bands, respectively, Carl Heubner, Charles Brendler and William F. Santelmann, decided the band competition.

The Cadet Corps' company competition, with 32 units participating, will be held May 8 and 9, it was announced, with Col. Frederic G. Kellong, U. S. A., in charge.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Again You Can See A Show in the Making

Public Rehearsal Scheduled Friday at Earle; Dr. Engel Has Those Nazimova Benefit Tickets; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

WE HAVE ALWAYS CONTENDED that there is more than meets the eye of the casual customer when an elaborate stage bill is presented on a local stage. It is the layman's inclination to take these things as more or less a matter of course. There it is, so it must have grown like that!

BELL

Anyone who ever has tackled the intricate job of routining a variety bill, timing the various acts, guarding against the repetition of musical numbers, doing something about the lighting and worrying himself outrageously over the annoying minutiae of such an undertaking knows that these stage bills that you see at the Earle and Capitol, for instance, do not spring into being at the waving of a magic wand. They represent a vast amount of concentrated, high-pressure, intensive preparation that must be crowded, usually, into a surprisingly brief space of time.

The component acts of the bill drift in from all points of the compass only a comparatively few hours before the show is intended to go on. They have to be whipped into a unified and skillfully co-ordinated whole between sunrise and opening hour on the day of the first performance.

Precisely how that minor miracle of showmanship is accomplished will be revealed to the Washington public on next Friday morning when Harry Anger, production manager at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, will hold a public rehearsal of the "Youth Parade of 1939" revue that will constitute the stage attraction on Thirteenth street next week.

While the usual schedule of stage performances will be observed on Friday, just as on every other opening day, if there be any among you who wish to observe how these living portions of the weekly bills are molded into shape for public scrutiny, that opportunity will be afforded Friday morning at 10.

Those who wish to arise in the middle of the night in order to avail themselves of this innovation will be privileged to view Mr. Anger and his charges in action. It ought to prove an enlightening and enlivening experience for those who have labored under the delusion that these things engineered by Harry Anger, at the Earle, and Gene Ford, at Loew's Capitol, just happen.

One suspects, even at that, the general public will not be the beneficiary of a complete revelation of all of the trials and tribulations of a production manager, at the Earle on Friday morning. Ordinarily, I believe, the rehearsals begin at 8 a. m., and continue to as near opening time as is necessary. The public rehearsal is set for 10 a. m. as I have said.

There can be a tremendous amount of tearing of the hair, stamping, cussing and finger nail-biting between the hours of 8 and 10 a. m. Perhaps, after all, the public will encounter only a mild dilution of what usually goes on backstage before the curtain rises! It ought to be good, even so!

As has been announced here on a previous occasion, the welfare committee of the Washington Variety Club is sponsoring the opening night's performance of Mme. Alla Nazimova's production of "The Mother," at the National Theater, on Monday, April 17. A sotto voce and surreptitious tip to those wishing to secure the most favorable seat locations for this distinguished occasion would be that they may best be obtained from Dr. Archie Engel, 1416 F street, phone Di. 7142. Dr. Engel is Variety's head man in the ticket wagon and will be able to provide better seats for Nazimova's return to the National for the first time since her performance there in Ibsen's "Ghosts" than anyone else, not excluding Eddie Keller, the National's perspicacious treasurer.

As we have remarked before, there is a considerable advantage in learning one thing each day—or each night, as the case may be. So when we ran into Eddie Peabody, coheadlining this week's stage bill with Sibyl Bowan at Loew's Capitol Theater, and asked how he ever happened to combine his violin didoes with his superlative banjo-playing, we were a mite surprised to have Eddie tell us that the violin was his original instrument and that the banjo came along as more or less of an afterthought. Maybe we haven't been keeping up with Eddie as we should have been—we have only been on his neck a decade or two now!

However, the fact remains that his "Listen to the Mocking Bird" number is, to all intents and purposes, a personal trademark and that he was the first one—to the best of his knowledge or mine—ever to conceive the notion that a violin might as well be played with a celluloid pick as any of the fretted instruments. His adventurous experiments in musical innovation have won him rich rewards. But not in Nazi Germany.

Eddie is just back from a year and a half on the other side and, having played Germany last among his foreign bookings, is a little maudlin in his joy at being home. "When I played my first American date, after returning," he says, "I told the manager that not only would I put on my act, but would gladly work the lights, run the elevator do errands and sweep out the theater after the show."

Not only was Mr. Peabody insulted at every turn on German soil—with special emphasis upon the hatred in which President Roosevelt is held—but he came out of the melee $2,000 short of what he was supposed to receive.

You would be interested in Eddie's story, if I had time and space in which to relate it in full.

Last night at the Capitol, by the way, 500 members of the Washington Plate Printers Union, Local No. 2, attended the last performance in compliment to Edwin Steffe, featured baritone on the vaudeville bill. Manager Howard Burkhardt, of the Capitol, had reserved a full section of seats for the enthusiasts who were anxious to pay tribute to an artist who, it seems, on occasion, has done favors for them.

If you are interested, "Love Affair," on the screen at RKO-Keith's, is running far ahead of the attendance record of "Gunga Din"—which is something. The Irene Dunne-Charles Boyer vehicle is even exceeding the mental prognostications registered in the mind—if any—of this column before it opened. It deserves it.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., April 3.—The $20,000 "telephone party" from here to San Francisco for the preview of "Alexander Graham Bell" has paid dividends. The picture not only made Don Ameche a star, but he came first in the hearts of his countrymen. Sonja Henie took the same place among the ladies. But we'll all have to go back to see the fair. All we got was a sea of faces.

HOPPER

The biggest hit, as usual, with our people was Mayor Rossi. When Mr. Zanuck saw his beautiful office at the fair grounds, he said: "Gee, I must have a den like that." Earl Carroll went incognito, and pointed out strange people all day as Earl Carroll. It wasn't hard to keep track of the gang, any male member missing could always be found at Sally Rand's Nude Ranch.

When the speeches were made at luncheon, they almost forgot to introduce Director Irving Cummings, who, incidentally, did a swell job.

Sylvia Fairbanks and Connie Bennett had a hard night, poor dears—couldn't sleep. But that wasn't the case with Mrs. Bill Goetz, who took her beautiful monogrammed pink sheets along with her, and distilled water for her toothbrush.

Sonja had never met Annabella and, just before they left, introduced herself. At the preview Sonja whispered, "I didn't know Mr. Ameche had so much romantic appeal." But little Bob Watson was the real scene stealer. And that couple who spent most of the night on the rear platform of the train had a marvelous time. Cesar Romero seemed to be attracted by a little blonde hairdresser who waved the ladies and hitch-hiked her way into the party. Elsa Maxwell opened up the town and picture.

San Franciscans gave our people a grand welcome. They always do. Up to date, Metro has always been the fair-haired child in our northern city. Because Mr. Mayer has never let them down. When he promised a stellar attraction, they got it. Even on St. Patrick's Day when he was sick abed, Joe Scott went up in his place and made the speech for him with Bob Taylor as the headliner.

The Shriners started the hands-across-the-State some years ago. Theirs was the first expedition of this sort I'd ever taken. The way they handle crowds up there, whipping up and down those hills, is something to marvel at. Now we've started, let's keep it up. San Francisco's friendship is real, honest, and no hidden motives behind it. But I'm going back to see the fair, it's breathtakingly beautiful.

Clark and Carole always said they wanted a honeymoon at Niagara Falls. Boulder Dam was the nearest thing to it! Looks like clear sailing ahead for those two—their bumps are all behind them. They're in the same stellar position, so there can be no jealousy on that score. Neither is greedy for money. They have no desire to warm a throne. Their wild oats have been digested.

Carole became Mrs. Gable with one thought in mind: He's my man! And they kept their promise to the press: gave the story to all.

London producer Leonard Markham is heading for Hollywood to sign up Maria Belita, that wonderful skater and dancer I told you about. He telephoned me all the way from London—oh, yeah? Just the pixie in me!

I understand the story behind Countess di Frasso' latest blast anent Baron Barnakow was due to the fact that she'd been feuding with Kay Francis, the baron's fiancee. Some day our dear countess may get a headline that will upset even her applecart.

Girls, unless you want to be the life of the party, be careful about a high dive in those strapless bathing suits—'cause they skin to the knees!

With a house packed to the last inch of standing room by a distinguished audience that included the British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay, the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company last night was accorded a triumphant welcome back to the National Capital.

It was a dual bill that regaled those in enthusiastic attendance last night—"Trial by Jury," as the curtain-raiser, and "The Pirates of Penzance," as the piece de resistance of the evening. Both were sung and acted with that punctilious perfection that has come to be the hallmark of this supreme organization in the interpretation of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

There is little need now to recapitulate the various elements of greatness in the Savoyard operettas. They are the models by which all other light musical works are judged. It is in the manner of their presentation that the D'Oyly Carte Company excells. True to the finest traditions of these noble works, this superb group of artists bring to the text and the familiar melodies of the musical gems that comprise their repertoire a faithfulness of treatment that amounts to a complete and impressive reverence. There is a finesse, a perfectly attuned esprit de corps and a unified appreciation of the superlative creations of two masters in their field, in everything they do, that serves to set them apart from all other groups in the theater, with the possible exception of the Irish Theater Players from Dublin, whose work exemplifies the same sort of specialized genius.

Bill of Contrast and Color

Last night's "double bill," of course, provided contrast and color, in addition to the inspired harmony between casts and vehicles.

"Trial by Jury" is a lively and amusing musical recital of a marital rift, in the adjudication of which the "Learned Judge" proves to be the "best man." Usually it is considered a minor item of professional interest. In the hands of the D'Oyly Carte players, it becomes a work of major interest and importance, finely shaded, effectively counterpointed and productive, in one act, of as much merriment as customarily accrues from three acts of ordinary "musical comedy."

It was splendidly played and acted last evening by the principals whose names appear at the top of this column. William Sumner was a bombastic and provocative judge and Margery Abbott and Leonard Osborn engaging principals in the legal action.

"The Pirates of Penzance" enlisted the services of an entirely different cast of characters, who brought to their acting and singing assignments as keen an appreciation of the requirements of their parts as had been manifested by their predecessors on the bill.

Green Receives Ovation

It was in "The Pirates" that Martyn Green made his first entrance of this engagement and the reception he received must have been warming to his heart. His performance in the role of Maj. Gen. Stanley was such—as it always is—as to justify the lusty welcome he received. As the pirate king, Darrell Fancourt contributed an interpretation of the role that must become the yardstick by which all other impersonations are measured. The four daughters of the Major General were delightfully played and sung by Helen Roberts, Marjorie Eyre, Ivy Sanders and Maysie Dean, with Evelyn Gardiner repeating her resoundingly facile impersonation of Ruth, the "pirate maid of all work."

The settings of both operettas were beyond reproach and the augmented orchestra, under the incomparable conductorship of Isidore Godfrey, was one of the outstanding treats of the evening. Entr'acte applause was divided last evening between Mr. Godfrey and Robert Montgomery, no less distinguished in the cinema, who occupied a first-row seat and was quickly discovered by the overflow house and generously acclaimed.

The Gilbert and Sullivan operas, after a span of more than half a century, may not be "news," but it is, at least, a pleasant duty to report that they are being presented at the National this week perhaps just a little better than usual by the one organization in the world that is capable of doing them best.

Tune Written To Fit Steps

Eleanor Powell, on vacation from her studio, is working harder than ever on an elaborate ballet which she is creating with Walter Ruick, her pianist, for "Broadway Melody of 1940."

The number, which will be called the "Flame Ballet," is being written in an unusual way. Miss Powell conceives the steps of the routine and Ruick composes the music to fit that special step. Each step will receive a different musical treatment. As the dance is built, the music is composed.

Lion Fishes

Bert Lahr, the Cowardly Lion of "The Wizard of Oz," and Bobby Connelly, dance director, are planning a fishing trip to Mexico immediately following the finish of the picture.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 3 (INS).—Richard Carlson, who came nearer to being "Golden Boy" than Wally Simpson did to becoming Queen of England, can't get out of his New York play contract. I reckon the happiest boy over that piece of news is Bill Holden. He is "Golden Boy," having been officially signed today by Harry Cohn to costar with Barbara Stanwyck, thus ending Hollywood's greatest manhunt in years. Even David Selznick's search for a Scarlett wasn't more extensive than the testing and interviewing of 3,000 applicants for the Clifford Odets hero.

LOUELLA PARSONS

How about Bill. He is a Pasadena, Calif., college youth whose face has never been seen on the screen excepting in a test made by Paramount. Twenty-one years of age, he has blue eyes and dark brown hair that is on the wavy side, is unmarried and lives at home. This is how he was chosen. Harry Cohn, William Perlberg, the producer, and Rouben Mamoulian, the director, were looking at tests sent in from other studios. When Holden was flashed on they all said "That's Golden Boy." P. S.—He plays the violin a little and he can box.

The recent magazine article in Ken describing how Drs. George and Gladys Dick discovered a successful scarlet fever antitoxin looks like a screen story to Eddie Grainger, one of Universal's top producers. He is now negotiating with the two doctors, who are husband and wife, to make a picture along the lines of a modern Pasteur. With a more romantic angle and dealing with two American scientists. The Drs. Dick are associated with the Department of Medicine at the University of Chicago and that is where most of their experiments were made. Eddie would like to sign Ronald Colman to play Dr. Dick and this would be the first time Ronnie has played a doctor since the never-to-be-forgotten "Arrowsmith."

David Lloyd George, England's war-time prime minister, played critic when "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" was previewed in London and gave his opinion on a preview card. He wrote in his own hand that while he felt it was a very good picture, he thought one of the scenes was too lengthy and should be eliminated to speed up the action. Needless to say, Director Sam Wood, who is keeping the card as one of his most prized souvenirs, took Mr. George's advice. The Woods—Sam and Clara—get back tomorrow after spending more than six months in England while he filmed the James Hilton story.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: What's this—a new romance between Marjorie Weaver and Vic Orsatti? They were stepping Sunday night at Marcel's and were together several places last week. Rumor is strong that the new sparkler Evelyn Keyes is wearing was put on her finger by Barton Bainbridge. Janet Gaynor and Adrian paid me a visit Saturday, but didn't say when they would marry. But don't be surprised if it's soon. Mrs. Leslie Howard and daughter, Leslie Ruth, reach here Wednesday. They have rented the Balderston house in Beverly Hills. Sonja Henie and Richard Greene dancing until the wee sma' hours at La Conga. Donald Budge, the tennis champ, delighted the customers at the Hawaiian Paradise by playing the drums. Alice Faye hostessing a party at Victor Hugo's for her brother Bill and his fiancee, Eleanor Hansen. Cesar Romero and his beard attracting the diners at the House of Murphy, where he ate corned beef and cabbage with the George Murphys.

Addison Randall and his one-time bride, Louise Stanley, first at the House of Murphy and later at Cafe Lamaze; Gene Markey and his beautiful bride, Hedy Lamarr, dining quietly with his father at the Brown Derby; surprising to see Mr. and Mrs. Chester Morris, who are estranged, eating their Sunday dinner at the same place. Sitting nearby were Kay Francis and Baron Barnekow, Joy Hodges, who has been an ash blonde and a brunette all in a year, is now a flaming redhead and looks very pretty too; Harry Brand, popular Twentieth Century-Fox publicity head, and his Sybil (Mrs. Brand) leave Friday for a holiday in Honolulu; Joseph Schenck leaves later this week for New York and Florida; Fred Perry and Helen Vinson actually cooing over the dinner table. You'd never suspect they had ever parted; Countee di Frasso is choo-chooing East and will go on to Florida; Woody Van Dyke entertaining Flier Jimmy Mattern at the It Cafe.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Wife Safeguards Eddy's Clothes

A letter from Nelson Eddy informed friends in Hollywood that, thanks to traveling with his wife, he has mislaid no shirts, collars, socks or ties as yet. On previous tours it was no uncommon occurrence for Eddy to have to dash out to buy a new shirt just before a concert, due to having left laundry behind at the last stop.

Mungo and Evans Blank Nats for Dodgers, 2-0

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Clearwater, Fla., April 3.—Pardon us if we don't touch all the bases, as we are in the camp of the Brooklyn Dodgers and thus—as Hitler would say—within their sphere of influence. It's an old Dodger custom which long ago inspired Westbrook Pegler to name 'em the daffiness boys. Brooklyn teams have been trying to prove it ever since. Brooklyn baseball is another name for embarrassing traffic jams on the bases, valiant attempts to make double plays with two out, and other such delightful items as would cause the old Orioles to revolve in their mausoleums.

POVICH

At that, the Dodgers aren't as daffy as previous editions of the Brooklyn club. They lost a lot of their lunacy when Outfielder Babe Herman, noted for covering a great deal of ground in the wrong direction, finally lost a decision to a concrete wall. And there has been a steady infiltration of good, sound baseball sense with the signing of such trustworthy old-timers as Luke Sewell and Tony Lazzeri during the past year. They sort of tone down the average incorrigibility of the club.

But once a Dodger always a Dodger. Just when it seemed that Brooklyn had reformed and was ready to shake its reputation for daffiness, Pete Coscarart, a Dodger of some years' standing, finally went native. It was on the occasion of a game with the Reds at Tampa a couple of weeks ago. Coscarart made the only Brooklyn hit of the game—a nice double to center—and neglected the formality of touching first base, an omission that he later discovered nullified his hit and presented two Cincinnati pitchers with a no-hit performance.

Dodgers' No. 1 Screwball

On the whole, however, the daffiness of the Dodgers in recent years has been administrative rather than competitive. And there is some doubt, also, that it can be described as daffiness. It may even border on shrewdness. Screwball No. 1 of the Dodgers now is General Manager Leland Stanford MacPhail. Rival club owners don't know yet whether he is a zanie in the best Brooklyn traditions or whether he is a man to be reckoned with.

MacPhail has showed no respect whatsoever for the hoary traditions of the stodgy industry of baseball which has always been content to give the customers a ball game and take their money. It was he who instituted night baseball in the big leagues and made rival club owners swallow their laughs and like it, and it was MacPhail who thought it would be a bright idea to give the fans a track and field meet between the baseball athletes before a game between the Dodgers and the Cardinals last summer. On that occasion he hired, also, Jesse Owens, to race some of his Brooklyn boys in baseball shoes.

It was that sort of stuff by MacPhail that prompted one morning newspaperman to dispatch the following piece to his paper after the game:

"The Brooklyn Dodgers had a great night at Ebbets Field last evening. They won the 100-yard dash, the broad jump, swept all three places in the pole vault and were one-two in the high hurdles. Their only setback was in the ball game, which the Cardinals won and thus knocked the Dodgers back into the second division."

Seeks Monopoly on Catching Talent

With the past week, MacPhail engineered a notable player deal for the Dodgers. To the Boston Bees he swapped Pitcher Bill Posedel for Catcher Al Todd. There was more than a bit of amazement in the Brooklyn camp, because what the Dodgers needed was pitchers, and they already had five catchers. But MacPhail's explanation was short:

"Todd will help us," he said. "Besides, I'm trying to corner the market on catchers."

Among the National League baseball people who have come to respect MacPhail for his business management is Will Terry, of the Giants. Terry has no great personal admiration for the Brooklyn redhead, but he no longer underestimates him. There was the matter of Terry's purchase of Russ Evans, a likely-looking pitcher at New Orleans for whom Terry paid $10,000 last summer. A clerical error in the Giants' business office put Evans on the reserve list of their Jersey City farm instead of on the list of the Giants, and last winter MacPhail claimed Terry's $10,000 pitcher in the draft for $7,500. Currently in the Dodgers' camp, Evans hasn't allowed a run for 14 innings.

If this business of grabbing bright young ball players keeps up, the jovial MacPhail will find it increasingly tough to insist that he is a screwball. Because also in the Dodgers' camp at this time is a young fellow named Pete Reiser who was one of the 100-odd players declared free agents by Judge Landis last year in the famous Cedar Rapids case which involved the Cardinals' farm system. That act by Landis was tantamount to the Dred Scott decision of baseball. Anyway, MacPhail snatched Reiser from the mob of free agents and at this writing the lad is hitting .520 in the Dodgers' spring games.

Reiser's rival for the second base job is Pete Coscarart, who is not hitting .520. Coscarart is hitting, to be exact, .230. But MacPhail, who was asked today who the Dodgers' second baseman would be, said Reiser would be farmed out and Coscarart would get the job. I don't know what to make of the man.

On the Line

With Considine

New York, April 3.—It is beginning to be the rule, instead of the exception, for high-minded baseball moguls to palm off a dead one in baseball trades. The baseball firm holds on to an employe until it squeezes what it wants out of him, and then with a straight face barters the drained remains. Which is one of the reasons why we doubt whether Zeke Bonura will be the ball of fire that the Giant fans are convinced he'll be. If he were any good, old man Griffith down in Washington wouldn't have let him go, nor would all the other American League clubs have kissed the boy goodby.

CONSIDINE

The Giants traded Dick Bartell, in some respects their most popular player, at the end of last season. There was some hue and cry among the customers, but that has dimmed considerably since it became public property that the fellow has an arthritis condition which imperils his future ball playing. He hasn't been able to play in a single game this spring, and finally was sent to a Chicago hospital by the Cubs on Sunday.

Wrigley Long a "Fall Guy"

If Bartell plays no more baseball and it develops that Chicago gave up a fair to middling shortstop named Jurges for only a rheumatic pain, it should come as no shock to Phil Wrigley. He has been the fall guy of the National League ever since he put his nose in it. He should be pretty used to it by now.

He bought a sore arm and shoulder for $185,000 last year, when the Cardinals unloaded Dizzy Dean with crocodile tears. Before that he bought Curt Davis, one of those losing-cause pitchers, and Chuck Klein for a total of $150,000, give and take a few grand. He made the grave error of not buying the right field fence at the Phillies ballyard, to go with Klein, and in a couple of years he sent him back, so that in effect the Phillies, who exist chiefly by selling over-glamorized palookas, really rented Klein to Wrigley for a couple of years at close to $50,000 a year.

Sanctified old Connie Mack and Clark Griffith are a couple of solemn and beloved old boys, whose sole interest is the welfare of the game, and the promulgation of fair play. But at heart they are a couple of David Harums, ready to sell a Sheffield Farms dairy horse for a Man o' War any day.

Mack Played Smart

Mr. Mack, for instance, had a pretty good idea that Lefty Grove had a sore arm, before weepingly parting with him for 100,000 of Tom Yawkey's crisp bank notes. By a curious coincidence, Grove got over what ailed him, else there might have been a pretty mess in the papers. Mack was even smarter the year after the Grove sale. He had finished last, so he sold Foxx, Marcum, McNair, Cramer and Walberg to Yawkey for $300,000 more and finished no worse or better the following year. McNair, Marcum and Walberg are now through.

Griffith displayed considerable anguish over selling Cronin for $250,000, but not as much anguish as a certain rude group of Boston fans who gave Joseph a merry bazoo for a couple of years. Cronin broke his wrist pretty badly on Labor Day of 1934, and the sale was consummated when the thing was still in a cast. It took him until 1938 to approximate his old time form.

There are two precedents on the books that might protect a robbed buyer of baseball ivory, in case he ever wanted to yell moider and take the thing to court. Back in 1919 Washington sold Al Schacht to Jersey City for $3,000 and a couple of bats. Schacht had been operated on for appendicitis not long before the sale, but neither he nor the club mentioned that. Finally it came time for him to pitch and he could hardly get the ball up to the plate, so the minor league club let out a peal of rage and got its money back.

Famed Case at Point

A famed case in point was the story of Play Fellow, that superb looking full brother of Man o' War. Harry Sinclair paid $100,000 for him but it became apparent within a few days after the sale that the colt was a wind-sucker. Physically he was the spitting image of the wonder horse. Sinclair was nuts about his coat, but he didn't like his pants.

He took the case to court, proved that the colt was unsound, and got back his dough.

Auto Racer Narrowly Escapes From Flaming Car in Coast Accident

Washington Outhits Foes In Futility

DeShong, Appleton Turn in Creditable Performances, But Mates Fail to Click

By Shirley Povich.
Staff Correspondent.

Clearwater, Fla., April 3.—The Nats played errorless ball today. They also played useless ball and runless ball, and they were slapped down by the Brooklyn Dodgers by the tight little figures of 2 to 0.

The Nats outhit the Dodgers, but their hitting today was an unbroken succession of anti-climaxes. They made a hit in every inning but the sixth, but they never made more than one hit in any inning. And sadder still is the fact that only one Washington player reached third base in a base-running capacity.

The gents who daubed the Nats with their shut-out were young Russ Evans, a fugitive from the White Sox who has found his way into the National League, and the notable Van Lingle Mungo. Evans did the best job on the Nats. He shut them out for seven innings before Mungo went to the mound to make it unanimous for nine.

Get Good Pitching

The failure of the Nats to get any runs amounted to high treason in the face of the pitching they receoived from Jimmy DeShong and Pete Appleton, particularly DeShong. Working the first six innings, the red-headed righthander surrendered only four hits to the Dodgers and only one run, which was a tainted affair.

After a brief show of wildness, DeShong steadied and would have escaped undamaged save for a pair of untoward circumstances in the third inning. That was the inning when Lazzeri singled and stole second with the help of Rick Ferrell's low throw, and it was also the inning in which Buddy Lewis failed to come up cleanly with Stainback's single down the third base line which scored Lazzeri.

DeShong held the Dodgers hitless in the fifth and sixth and then turned over the pitching to Appleton, who was doing very well until the eighth. Then he pitched a fast low ball to Manager Leo Durocher, instantly realizing his mistake when Durocher knocked it over the nearby rightfield fence for a home run.

Here's What Happened

Second inning—Ferrell walked with two out, DeShong singled and Case flied out.

Seventh inning—Bluege led off with a single, Wasdell and Early grounded out and DeShong flied out.

Ninth inning—Early singled with two out, Appleton grounded to Durocher.

Notes of the Nats—The Nats, who couldn't reach the home base this afternoon, were due to reach it tonight when they arrive at Orlando at the end of their four-day road trip . . . The trip showed a victory over the Bees and defeats by the Reds and Dodgers . . . Tomorrow is an open date, the Nats resuming their exhibition schedule on Wednesday against Baltimore at Daytona Beach . . . Freddie Sington, the former Nat who is now a highly prized member of the Dodgers' outfield, is down to 210 pounds and will play regularly . . . Tony Lazzeri has given up his second base ambitions and will attempt to win the third base job with the Dodgers . . . Thirty-eight-year-old Luke Sewell is due to stick with Brooklyn as its No. 2 catcher . . . Taft Wright made the mistake of hitting a ball to dead centerfield in the sixth inning today, the only direction in which it could not evolve as a home run . . . The Nats used to pound this Red Evans when he was a rookie with the White Sox, but today they achieved nothing but singles against him, and not many of those . . . Van Mungo is called "Shuffleboard Mungo" by his Dodger playmates, not because of any devotion to that game, but because of his feet.

Cox, Bean Capture Season's First Pro-Amateur Event Here

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Wiffy Cox, smooth-swinging Congressional pro, and lanky Eddie Bean, Indian Spring amateur, joined forces in capturing top honors in the inaugural event of Washington's competitive golf campaign yesterday, hanging up a 69 to win the pro-amateur tournament over Silver Spring's course.

But Cox's efforts to add the pro-sweepstakes purse to his bulging trophy collection were thwarted by Cliff Cpencer, Beaver Dam, who matched the sandy-haired Congressional shotmaker's 37 strokes for the 18-hole test.

wind from back tees. Cox was on top of his game, but still needed timely assistance from Bean to lead the field. Wiffy was over par on six holes, but offset this to some extent by ramming in birdies on the fourth, fifth and sixth greens. And on four of the holes on which Cox was over the prescribed number of strokes Bean came through with pars.

Spencer and Maury Fitzgerald shared honors for the lone eagles of the afternoon, the former getting his after a beautiful drive and dead approach on the 480-yard fifteenth hole. Fitzgerald holed out with a No. 8 iron, 100 yards off the green, on the short seventh.

Spencer, who turned in a card including 13 pars and his eagle, also needed the help from his partner, Jock Olmsted, of Indian Spring, to clink runner-up laurels in the large field. Olmsted carded a par on the first hole, while Cliff was one over with a five, and came through with a birdie three on the tenth when Spencer again was over par with five.

Two teams tied for third money, Spencer and Claude Rippy, Congressional Club champion, with par 71s, and Bean was in the money again, this time with host pro Al Jamison, with a best-ball round of even par. Jamison and Jock Olmsted were a shot over par with 72 for fifth prize, while six teams tied with 73s for the sixth prize, Willie Schreiber, Mount Pleasant course of Baltimore, and William Duke, of the same club, winning in the draw.

Cox and Spencer divided the pro-sweeps money, while Rut Coffey, Winchester professional, was two shots out with a 73. Schreiber, Al Houghton and sectional P. G. A. president Ralph Beach had 77s in the high-scoring day, that found a majority of the totals over the 80-mark.

Teams that finished in the sixth-place tie, won by Schreiber and Duke included E. G. Barnes, Rolling Road amateur, with two partners, Johnny Bass, Clifton Bark and Andy Gibson, Bonnie View; Bass and Spencer Overton, also of Rolling Road, and two of Wiffy Cox's partners, Gillie Young, Congression-

No School, No Pay For St. Louis Kids On Opening Day

St. Louis, April 3 (AP).—The kids won't have to rely on that age-worn excuse—"I had to attend my grandmother's funeral"—to see the opening major league baseball game here this year.

School children between the ages of 10 and 16 will be excused from classes to attend the Browns-Cleveland contest as guests of the home club.

Schuman to Defend Table Tennis Title

Elias Schuman, District of Columbia table tennis champion, will defend his crown at the new courts in the Chevy Chase Ice Palace, on Saturday, February 25, in the District championships.

Action will begin on Saturday at 2 p. m. with the finals at 8 p. m. Sunday.

Augusta Loss Sends Snead Home for Rest

Slammin' Sam Anxious To Adjust Game After Masters Defeat

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 3.—With some philosophical murmurs about always just missing the jackpot, Sam Snead came home today to get rid of some of the mental strain.

The Slammer, who saw his 280 in the Augusta, Ga., National Golf Tourney edged out yesterday by Ralph Guldahl's record-breaking 279, drove 500 miles overnight to get away from it all.

He intends to stay on the Old White Grounds for at least once a month, resting from the winter tour and doing a little teaching.

Another reason for hurrying back was that Sam wants to play host to the 40-odd amateurs who will be here next Monday for the nineteenth Mason-Dixon Men's Tournament.

Remarking on the way Guldahl poled out a back-nine 33 to get one under him yesterday, Snead said:

"Guldahl does it too often for it to be luck. I was getting along all right myself except for that third round 72 when my putter let me down badly. With a break there I'd have been head man."

Slammin' Sam, who had to take a month off during the winter tours because of illness, said the 1938-39 winter circuit was "only fair."

"I'm still not really on my game and my winnings are far below a year ago," said Snead, "but the other pros seem to think the tour was pretty good.

"It's still pretty much the same old game with the same faces."

Detroit's Expensive Rookie Stars in Four-Inning Stretch

Johnny Mize's Homer and 15 Hits Win 11-5 Game for Cards; Reds Whip Red Sox

By the Associated Press.

Lakeland, Fla., April 3.—Brilliant pitching by Floyd Giebell and Fred Hutchinson, recruit right-handers, enabled the Detroit Tiger regulars to down Toronto, of the International League, 5-1, in an exhibition contest here today.

Toronto got only four hits, three of them off Giebell in the first five innings. Hutchinson, who finished, gave his best performance of the training season, allowing but one scratch single.

Bill Weir, a southpaw, and Philip Marchildon, a right-hander, pitched for Toronto, the former being charged with the loss as a result of allowing five singles, five walks and three runs in four innings.

Curt Davis and Bill McGee gave up ten hits to the Southerners. All of the runs were scored off McGee.

1,000 Fight Fans, Stymied by View Howl for Money

By the Associated Press.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, April 3 (AP). The Puerto Rican Sports Commission shattered tradition today by ordering the ticket prices refunded to 1,000 fans who complained they hadn't been able to see last night's bantamweight championship fight between victorious Sixto Escobar and K. O. Morgan. Some 12,000 spectators crowded into the stadium, which has a seating capacity of less than 10,000.

Lou Brix, Escobar's manager, said there would be no return engagement between Sixto and Morgan at Detroit. Brix said the champion probably would go to France for his next fight.

Teddy Patic Wins by Head in Feature Race at Bowie Track

Son of Teddy Brings Home $13.10 Pay

By Walter Haight.

A Star Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., April 3.—Teddy Patic, five times an "also ran" in California last winter, must have picked up a lot of speed on the fast train that brought him East. Today, in the colors of H. G. Bedwell, veteran Maryland horseman, the son of Teddy showed an excellent effort to take a head decision over Mrs. M. E. Martin's Little Drift. For some reason, the Teddy Patic backers had to wait until a photo was developed, after which they collected a $13.10 mutuel. Carnage was third in the field of nine fair platers going 6 furlongs.

The race, for $2,000 to $2,500 claimers, was the best event of a featureless program that drew 7,000 spectators. The track was improving rapidly after the week-end downpour and was rated in good condition as the program began. Time for the races were far from records, with a stiff wind blowing against the thoroughbreds in the stretch run.

Teddy Patic was off in the first flight and was rated, while French Bread, Little Drift and Nansemond, the last named a disappointing favorite, battled for the pacemaking honors. Leaving the backstretch, Jockey Al Shelhamer sent Teddy Patic to the outside for racing room and came around to get to the front.

The Bedwell sprinter then opened what appeared to be a safe lead, only to have to be ridden out when Little Drift closed with a rush. Carnage made up much ground from a slow start to crowd Nonsemond out of the money. The winner was clocked in 1:14.

Rancho's Girl, winner of the first 2-year-old race of the year at Hialeah, made it two straight for her short career by taking the opening event from five other juveniles going 4 furlongs. A candidate for the $2,500 Kindergarten Stakes here, Rancho's Girl closed a neck in advance of Arden Lass, one that ran out at the final bend. Noon Step, the favorite, was third after setting a swift pace and tiring. Jockey Charlie Stevenson rode the winner which paid $6.70.

O'Donnell's 49-41 Victor Over Peoples

A surprise 49-41 victory was taken last night by O'Donnell's Restaurant basketers over Peoples Drugs in the first game of a playoff for Section B title of the Southeast Community Center League. Juliam and Cornelison tallied 15 points apiece to lead in the victory.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BEACON ROCK, $13.70, $6.30, $3.80; PETE WENDLING, $5.20, $3.70; KEY MAN (entry), $3.50.

BEACON ROCK, closest to the pace of REDPOOT, was rated in the early stretch and came smartly when placed to a drive to dispose of KEY MAN and won going away. PETE WENDLING, off in a tangle, came with a rush in the closing quarter. KEY MAN fought his way to the front in the stretch, but weakened suddenly. PHARO WARRIOR showed a good effort. AFFAIR, off slowly and taken up directly after the break, improved his position with a rush between horses leaving the backstretch and weakened in the closing stages.

Daily Double, Rancho's Girl and Beacon Rock, paid $50.70.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MYSTERY MISS, $3.20, $2.90, $2.40; SAVING GRACE (field), $17.80, $8.00; CHARLES F., $3.80.

MYSTERY MISS, off alertly, opened a good lead at once, drew out and won with speed in reserve. SAVING GRACE, always a forward factor, held on gamely in the final test to show a good effort. CHARLES F., off slowly, came with a rush from a trailing position to close fastest of all. TONY STEEL went evenly.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROOKE HEROOD, $13.70, $8.40, $4.90; HAPPY ROAD, $25.90, $11.80; TURKISH BRAND, $3.10.

BROOKE HEROOD forced to the front at once, set a good pace, shook off the challenge of CLEVER GIRL and lasted ahead of HAPPY ROAD while under punishment. HAPPY ROAD, a forward factor from the start, came with good courage in the final drive and just missed. TURKISH BRAND was bothered by loose horses while making his move leaving the backstretch. CLEVER GIRL bolted out at the first turn when CHANCING lost his rider, recovered to be sent to the leader and faltered thereafter. MISS HOLLYWOOD was off in a tangle, was hard ridden and faltered. CHANCING stumbled and lost his rider while in close quarters going to the first turn. It was not a truly run race.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:33. Winner, H. O. Bedwell's ch. h. (5), by Teddy—Simpatica. Trained by H. O. Bedwell. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:14.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TEDDY PATIC, $13.10, $7.50, $5.00; LITTLE DRIFT, $28.90, $17.80; CARNAGE, $8.80.

TEDDY PATIC, forced wide for racing room, came around leaders swinging for the stretch to take command and just lasted under strong handling. LITTLE DRIFT, close up from the start, was rated approaching the stretch, rallied when placed to intermittent punishment and was closing on the winner at the end. CARNAGE, slow to begin, improved his position gradually and closed gamely. NEW DEAL, a trailer for 3 furlongs, came with a rush through the stretch. NANSEMOND weakened suddenly in the final eighth.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:05½. Winner, A. C. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY ROMA, $22.00, $7.90, $5.10; PANORAMA, $3.70, $2.90; FRANCO SAXON, $4.10.

LADY ROMA raced LADY ELGIN into submission, was steadied along when headed by FRANCO SAXON, responded when shaken up to get to the top in the stretch and barely stayed off the closing bid of PANORAMA. The latter, forced very wide at the first turn, improved his position on the outside and closed gamely under intermittent punishment. FRANCO SAXON was a keen forward factor to the midstretch and held on well. FIGHT BACK was taken up repeatedly and raced on his own courage.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates for all but MANTAGNA. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:31½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MON DOIT, $5.40, $3.60, $2.90; LADY DEMOCRAT, $7.40, $5.90; NANCY MAE, $4.70.

MON DOIT, steadied along in the first flight, responded to strong urging in the late stretch to be up in the concluding stride. LADY DEMOCRAT raced PUDDLER into defeat to get a clear lead and held on gamely under pressure. NANCY MAE raced on the inside from the start and was listlessly handled. MANTAGNA was unprepared for the start, went in the air and closed full of run.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

Listed as the jockey on High Hedge in today's fifth race is one H. S. Takera. As far as I can learn he is the only Japanese horseman in the country. This will be the first time he has had a mount in Maryland, but he has ridden in the West. Takera, in addition to being a jockey, is an owner, trainer, blacksmith, veterinarian and jack-of-all-trades around the race tracks. He is a likeable little fellow with a broad smile and better than average judgment in a horse way. I have brought up the subject before, but I still wonder why Japanese and Filipinos do not take up the riding profession. The majority of them are naturally lightweights, plenty strong and courageous. Of course they come from races which have had little or no association with horses. However, some of our best Italian riders, Arcaro, Colitletti, Pascuma, Belizzi, Marinelli and others hardly had seen a horse before they came to a race track for the first time. The Middle and Far West still produce the majority of top boys. This group comes from youngsters who have been virtually raised in the saddle. The bill to compel Maryland tracks to install totalisators has been killed. Nice that the tracks do not have to go for the expense, but I still believe they would be better off. One thing is sure, the bettors would have gotten a good break. As long as some of the Maryland tracks insist upon offering horse and buggy racing they are going to make horse and buggy profits. However, the other three big tracks have their eyes on Pimlico, which really is trying, and if the Baltimore track makes the grade with its big-time ideas then the others probably will fall in line. If I don't start picking some winners it looks like I'll be falling in line, too—in the bread line. BILL.

First race—Star Struck won twice over better grade juveniles last spring before he went wrong. He has the class and need only be fit to win the opener. War Grand was an easy winner at Oaklawn and is in fine fettle. Sir Time showed good efforts over the Bowie course last fall.

Second race—Geodesian showed speed to capture second place his first start of the season and witn that conditioner under his belt should have little trouble winning this one. Winning Streak was right right behind Geodesian in that event. Appears next best. Pascua can better poor recent effort.

Third race—Maecloud needed his race behind Rissa last Saturday and should be ready for a winning effort. Had good form last year. Our Chest displayed excellent form at Santa Anita and appears the one to beat. Usin will be dangerous if fit.

Fourth race—Blazing Heat easily turned back a field of this caliber last Friday and there is nothing here that figures to beat him. Pharabelle beat better grade platers at Santa Anita and will go well if track is fast. Blazeraund won his last race here; may be dangerous.

Fifth race—Unselfish raced with the best handicap horses at Santa Anita with creditable efforts. Meeting a bunch of second raters here he stands out as the class. Little Miracle had good form last in Florida and should easily take care of the others. High Hedge has speed but may not last.

Sixth race—White Sand apparently tailed off after running excellent races with high-class platers at Santa Anita. Meeting a mediocre field today after freshening up, she should win. Trina is not outclassed, has speed but poor in late form. Weekly Stipend raced very well at New Orleans.

Seventh race—Long Bit made a good showing with this company Saturday, making her first start since last summer. He should improve over that race sufficiently to win this event. Lina's Son had speed opening day but tired; may threaten today. Prince Dean was a consistent horse in Florida; chance for show.

Best bet—Geodesian.

No Derby for This Maryland-Born Thoroughbred

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Because his owner, John Morris, considers the Preakness at Pimlico the greatest horse race on the continent, Volitant, outstanding 3-year-old, will pass up the Kentucky Derby for the Maryland event. He would be one of the favorites in the blue grass classic on May 6 if entered, having won four of his six starts last year and finished a close second to El Chico in another. He is seen above in a workout and looking from his stall. He will probably run in the Chesapeake on April 22 as a tightener

Howell Rated Among Leading Heavyweights

Jim Howell, the big colored boy who is being imported to make passes at Willie Reddish Monday night at the Arena, isn't any slouch with the mittens, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn would have you know, but an honest-to-goodness heavyweight contender with considerable persuasive power in either fist.

Howell last night was accused of being golden gloves champion, national amateur champion, and international amateur champion, in that order, by Herr Ahearn, who further insists that the boy deserved a shot at the title more than Tony Galento.

Reddish's prospective opponent, according to Ahearn (and he has clippings to prove his point) was hailed as a genuine prospect last summer while a member of Joe Louis' training entourage. He was said to be the only man in camp who could give Louis a good workout, and was alleged to have cranked up and taken a couple of clean right-hand shots at the Louis chin without fear or equivocation.

Howell was so good he recently was offered the customary training camp fee of $25 per day and expenses, to help get the title-holder in condition for his forthcoming struggle with Jack Roper. The offer was refused, however.

D. C. Boxers Unhappy After National Bouts

Heine Miller Is Greatest Complainant

Maryland Coach Says Alperstein Defeated Rankin 'By City Block'

Washington's four-man delegation to the national intercollegiate boxing tournament arrived home yesterday with one title, a black eye, stiff muscles, and mounting indignation. The title and purplish peeper were the personal property of Fred Stant, Catholic University 165-pounder. The muscles and mounting indignation belonged to his teammates, Jay Turner and Joe Bunsa, and to Maryland's Ben Alperstein.

With them was Heine Miller, Maryland coach, and the most indignant of them all. Mr. Miller, whose command of Chinese adjectives under such circumstances is a revelation, was tired and most unhappy, and no little disappointed by the officiating in the tournament.

"Johnny Behr," he said before the train had even rolled to a stop, "Johnny Behr was one of the judges and he had Alperstein winning by a city block. For two rounds that Gene Rankin (Wisconsin lightweight) didn't lay a glove on Benny, and in the last round Alperstein goes out and slugs with him and has all the best of it. Look at Ben, does he look like he's been in a fight? He does not. There isn't a mark on him.

"Well, Behr, and he's coached our last two Olympic teams, coached Chicago's Golden Gloves teams, and been in the game ever since he was old enough to swing a mitten, he said Alperstein put it all over Rankin. Maybe I'm biased or prejudiced, but I don't think so in this case. If Benny lost I would call it one of the breaks and let it go at that, but he didn't lose, and that's what hurts."

Stant at His Best

Miller's testimony was supported by the boys. A fine feeling of camraderie prevailed among the quartet. Stant seconded Alperstein in his lone tournament appearance, and after that Ben worked in the Catholic University trio's corner.

"Stant," he said, "fought the best fights of his life out there . . . He made no mistakes. He took 'em all in order, jabbed nicely, used his right hand nicely and worked like a true champion. Freddy richly deserves his title, and I'm glad I was in his corner when he won it."

Bunsa, they agreed, was the victim of another bad decision, and Turner was the victim of his own enthusiasm. Bunsa went down in the second round but came up immediately with no serious consequences. For the remainder of the round and throughout the last round he chased his opponent around the ring and still couldn't sway the judges.

Turner all but had his man out in the third round when he ran into a straight right to the jaw and went down for the count. A little more caution would have won for him.

Tournament to Coast

Next year's tournament will be staged at either San Francisco or Sacramento, according to the returning warriors, who failed to see how it would attract more customers or arouse more enthusiasm than the last. Capacity throngs crowded the field house for every night performance.

So wrought up over it did the State Legislature get, it passed a resolution commending Wisconsin for its splendid work and wishing it the best of luck in the tournament—which was duly received.

The boys were impressed with high temperature boxing is running in Wisconsin. Every high school of any size has a boxing team, and every youngster's ambition now is to box for Wisconsin. The Badgers are the fair-haired boys.

The university is encouraging boxing in every manner. The training equipment is the last word in bags, ropes, gloves, etc., and the varsity squad has at least one meal a day at a training table. Alperstein, accustomed to training in a hot, stuffy and crowded room in the basement of Ritchie Coliseum, was surprised to find three regulation rings in Wisconsin's training quarters.

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

New York, April 3.—Some of the more tepid followers of hockey are raising supercilious eyebrows these days as a result of the Stanley Cup series between the Rangers and the Bruins, who played seven games before reaching a decision as to which team should meet the Toronto Maple Leafs in the final playoff.

VIDMER

They seem to see something sinister in the fact that the series went the limit in spite of the fact that the Bruins won the first three games, intimating that it was purposely prolonged in order to cash in on the crowds of nearly 17,000 that witnessed each game.

It was, of course, rather unusual that the Rangers, after losing the first three, should come back and win the next three to tie the count and make the seventh game necessary. But it was not without precedent in the sphere of sports. Only a couple of years ago Columbus, champions of the American Association, won the first three games of the Little World Series from the Newark Bears, champions of the International League. Then the young Yankees came back and won the next four to take the title.

No one pointed any finger of suspicion at that series. Nor was there any suspicion connected with the world's series of 1924, 1925 and 1926, all of which were forced to the limit of seven games before a decision was reached.

But there is another answer to those who seem to see something sinister in the prolonged contests between the Bruins and the Rangers. It is necessary to go back almost 40 years to find it.

Just after the turn of the century there were a couple of kids who lived in West Mount, a suburb of Montreal, and both were hockey enthusiasts. They organized their own teams, fixed

Eagle Netmen Are Defeated By Cornell, 7-2

American U. Team Wins Only One Singles and Doubles

American University tennis team, fresh from a Southern trip upon which it won four out of five matches, fell before an invading team from Cornell University yesterday on the American courts, 7—2.

The Eagles won only one singles and one doubles encounter as Cornell players swept most of their matches in straight sets. Fausold and Landsman, of the Eagles, dropped individual matches to Randall and Devine, respectively, but came back in doubles to register victory over the team of Boochmer and Devine. Cornell took the first four matches handily.

Singles

Randall (C.) defeated Fausold (A. U.), 6—2, 6—2; Gifford (C.) defeated Webb, 7—5, 6—3; Devine (C.) defeated Dandsman, 6—0, 7—5; Schwartsman (C.) defeated Hudson, 6—1, 6—3; Sitnik (A.) defeated Affrom, 3—6, 6—4, 6—2; North (C.) defeated Evans, 6—2, 6—1.

Doubles

Randall-Gifford (C.) defeated Webb-Hudson, 6—2, 6—2; Fausold-Landsman (A.) defeated Boocher-Devine, 6—2, 4—6, 6—4; Schwartsman-Affrom (C.) defeated Sitnik-Evans, 7—5, 6—4.

Takoma's Volley Ball Team Leads

Turning back the Y. M. C. A. and Parkview Playground teams in heated engagements, Takoma Park advanced to the finals in the District volley ball championship tournament which opened last night on the Central "Y" court.

The host team was Takoma's first victim, bowing after a prolonged engagement by the scores of 15-9, 13-15, 15-5. The suburban team then disposed of Parkview in straight games, 15-11, 15-12. The winners drew a first round bye in pairings.

Parkview, along with George Washington University, remained in the running, however, by defeating the Colonials in an earlier match, while G. W. joined its conqueror in the semi-final round by virtue of a victory over Y. M. C. A. The scores were as follows:

G. W. U. defeated War Department, 15-3, 15-5; Parkview defeated G. W. U., 15-3, 3-15, 15-7; Takoma defeated Y. M. C. A., 15-9, 13-15, 15-5; Takoma defeated Parkview, 15-11, 15-12; G. W. U. defeated War Department, 15-7, 15-7; G. W. U. defeated Y. M. C. A., 15-7, 3-15, 15-7.

Three Teams Join Government Loop

The United States Government League, member of the National Capital Amateur Baseball Federation last night absorbed three teams formerly affiliated with the Commercial League, it was announced by John F. Maragon, field director of the federation. The teams were Pepco, Washington Gas Light and Union Printers.

According to Maragon, addition of the three teams made the U. S. Government League the strongest in the N. C. A. B. F. Other affiliates are Naval Air, F. B. I. and Treasury.

Maragon also announced last night that the Industrial League had applied for admission into the N. C. A. B. F., but the application will not be acted upon until the next meeting of the body.

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

We have before us a neatly penned invitation to address the English Club of Oxford University, in England, some time during the summer term or even later. We are given the latitude of our own convenience on the date.

RUNYON

We are not unmindful of the honor of the bid, though we are inclined to suspect error, if not jest. In any event, assuming from the title that the English club deals in English, we are quite sure that the gentleman offering the invitation, who signs himself Kenneth Gourlay, honorary secretary of the O. U. E. C., did not trouble to look up the form chart on us.

He would have learned that we do not perform in that sort of going worth a cent, we mean in English. We shudder to think of the embarrassment we would cause the American students at Oxford, like "Whizzer" White, of Colorado, if any of them happened to drop into the lecture hall of the English club and caught us floundering about the course.

He Took the $15,000

"Whizzer" is a University of Colorado young man who gained prodigious fame in his home land as a football player. He was all-American as a collegian. He won an Oxford scholarship and played professional football long enough last season to pick up $15,000, then he went t England to enjoy his scholarship.

Possibly enjoy is not the word. Someone was telling us not long ago, though by what authority we cannot state, that "Whizzer" is not entirely happy in Oxford and may return to the U. S. A. and more professional football. Perhaps he heard of the invitation and feared we might accept.

We are well acquainted with an Oxford scholar—another Colorado fellow, by the bye. He is Eddie Eagan, now an attorney in New York City. He not only gave Oxford a whirl, but took a crack at Yale and Harvard and some other institutions of learning in his time.

Eddie's first athletic fame was as an amateur boxer. He was a pippin of a light heavyweight and an Olympic games competitor as far back as 1920. He won the Olympic light heavyweight title that year. Then in 1932, he popped up on us as a member of the American Olympics four-man bobsled team, behind the redoubtable Jay O'Brien and with Billy Fiske and "Tippie" Gray.

These fellows won the four-man bobbing title against world competition on the dangerous Mount Van Hoevenberg run at Lake Placid. That was a great bunch of bobbers, if anybody asks you. Eddie seems to have dropped out of athletic manifestations since then.

An Oxford Athlete

We have been reading John Edgar Hoover's annual report of the work of the Federal Bureau of Investigation from July 1, 1937, to June 30, 1938, just issued. What interests us as much as anything else is the way those G-fellows go after automobile thieves.

They recovered no less than 3,253 stolen motor vehicles during the fiscal year stated. These vehicles were valued at $1,148,437.88, and were recovered in cases wherein the bureau performed investigative work. In addition, thirteen automobiles were recovered incidental to investigation conducted in regard to other violations, making a total of 3,266 automobiles recovered.

The national motor vehicle theft act was passed in October, 1919, and since then a total of 48,000 stolen motor vehicles has been recovered in cases in which the bureau performed investigative work, with a valuation of $26,685,901.42. In the fiscal year on which John Edgar Hoover is reporting, there were 2,093 convictions secured in this type of case, resulting in the imposition of 5,738 years, 1 month and 8 days, actual, suspended and probationary sentences.

Great Gift of Cab

We happen to be quite an admirer of John Edgar Hoover, director of the F. B. I., which was organized 30 years ago, though of course John has not been running it that long. He is a picturesque bachelor fellow, with a great gift of gab, an entirely justifiable penchant for publicity and a lot of ability.

The answer is that the one outfit with which the criminal element wants no truck is the F. B. I. It beats the Canadian Mounted for getting its man. Of 127 cases of kidnaping and plots to kidnap since the passage of the Federal kidnaping act in June, 1932, and as amended in May, 1934, the F. B. I. has solved all but three.

Look at what our dream about Challedon winning the Kentucky Derby did to the winter-book price on Mr. Brann's horse. The latest release of prices from Eddie Dodkin, the Chicago bookmaker, shows that we dreamed Challedon down from 15 to 1 to 8 to 1, making him second choice to Mr. Zeigler's El Chico.

The price against El Chico is now 9 to 2, or 4½ to 1, and that is sure a tightwad price because nobody knows if El Chico can go a mile and a quarter even in a trailer. You wait until the Wood Memorial in New York shakes out those Eastern Derby eligibles and you will then know more about them.

Catoctin low handicap players are now competing in a qualifying tournament to select the best team for the Hoyas, who are headed by Johnny Burke, national intercollegiate champion.

Everybody Happy Along Gowanus

Flatbush Floogies Expected to Go Places This Year

By Drew Middleton,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, April 3.—"Yessir," said the bartender, "everybody feels real good about them Dodgers. We have about three fights a night and last Sattidy they almost lynched some guy for sayin' Mungo wouldn't win 20 games."

That's the way it is in Brooklyn. Come spring and the "place" is alive with optimism. Come fall and there are interesting attempts to tar and feather the manager and some of his players, preferably Van Mungo.

We asked the barkeep if there were any dissenting voices. He admitted little Joe, the elder statesman of the bar's debating society, didn't feel quite secure. "He'll be along soon," he said, "he's got a brother-in-law living with him that roots for the jints, so he leaves home right after dinner."

Joe came stumping in. "I gone by Ebbets Field and looked at the grass," he announced. "Say, it's sproutin' fine. The outfield is fast. Will have to be. At that we'll have to put some of them outfielders on bicycles unless we get some pitchin'."

VAN LINGLE MUNGO

Lured by a stein of bock, Joe consented to a brief two-hour interview. He is optimistic, but several things puzzle him.

"In the foist place, why we got six catchers?" he asked the loungers who had bellied up to the bar. "Tree is enough for other clubs.

Dodger Fans See 20 Victories for Mungo, Says the Bartender

We gotta have six. Only reason I can figger is some of these pitchers is so fast they'll wear the catchers out."

"Listen, lug," said the bartender, "them pitchers got so little stuff one guy could catch 'em all season. And he wouldn't need no mask or protector. He could go up there naked."

Someone murmured they might be used for trading purposes.

"If they are it's goodbye," said Joe. "The Dodgers trade a guy and the next thing you know he is hittin' .500 and stealin' more bases than Cobb. We let Hassett go and I'll bet he leads the league in hittin' this year.

"But the rest of them bums look great. This kid Reiser is a sensa-

Hoyas Meet Eagles and Terps Face Vermont Here Today

Georgetown, American Make Debuts

Springer, of No-Hit, No-Run Fame, Will Hurl for Maryland Against Vermont

By Jack Munhall.

The busy college sports week shifts into high today as a pair of baseball games make it difficult for the discriminating fan. The choice is between the first gander at Joe Judge's Georgetown nine in its intra-city battle with American University at the Hilltop at 3 o'clock, and Maryland's contest with Vermont at College Park at 4.

Seeking their second straight victory after a tough opening loss to Ohio State, the Terps will look to Earl Springer, clever southpaw who hurled a five-inning no-hitter to blank Rutgers, 3-0, in his last start. Catching Springer will be Bob Burns.

American, playing its first game of baseball after a nine-year layoff, will be forced to take the field minus its star shortstop and heaviest hitter, "Barty" Bartlett. The latter took a job during the past season and will be lost to the Eagles the remainder of the season. Werksman will take over the shortstop job, while Brown and Hall will form the starting battery.

Capt. Reynolds is expected to get the slab assignment for the Hoyas, whose chief worry at the moment is lack of mound strength. Reynolds' battery mate will be Stan Blaszek, a junior who understudied Joe Keeging last season.

The Line-up

Otherwise Georgetown's first nine is expected to include (not in batting order): Joe Mahoney, first; Joe Moran, second; George Pajak, third; Lou Ghecas, shortstop; John McGowan, Joe Mellendeck and Johnny Schmitt, outfielders.

Mellendeck, outstanding backfield star of Georgetown's undefeated eleven, is a concerted shortstop. Possessed of plenty of speeed afoot, a strong throwing arm and a sure-hitting eye, Mellendeck is expected to develop into the team's most dependable gardener. His transfer from the infield was necessitated only by the unusual promise of Ghecas, but also because of the dearth of reliable outfielders.

Tomorrow, Maryland makes its first outdoor track apearance, with Dartmouth as an opponent—and a very strong one. The Big Green, decisive conqueror of Virginia, defending Southern Conference champion, looms as the outstanding cinder team scheduled to show here all season.

Hardvard Invades

On Thursday, Harvard will have two teams in the area. Its nine meets Georgetown and its lacrosse squad tackles Maryland. The following afternoon Maryland plays its second baseball game of the week, against Dartmouth, at College Park.

The seven-day program is concluded and climaxed Saturday with four events, three here. Maryland and V. P. I. will exchange courtesies. The Terps send their baseball representatives to Blacksburg, while the Keydets dispatch their trackmen to College Park. Also, Vermont furnishes Georgetown with its third baseball game of the week at the Hilltop and Penn State's lacrosse team invades Maryland.

Armstrong Offered $35,000 to Meet Day

Chicago, April 3 (AP).—Sam Pian, manager of Davey Day, said today he had offered Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong a $35,000 guarantee and an option of 40 per cent of the "gate" for a return bout with Day in Chicago this summer.

Day lost to Armstrong by a technical knockout in the twelfth round at New York last Friday night.

together the best stick handlers and skaters they could find and waged war on their rivals with all the intense fury of boys in their early 'teens.

They didn't play together on the same club, but had their separate gangs. And one was the son of a wealthy man who humored the whims of his youngster. That boy's team always had new sticks, the best skates, plenty of facilities for practice and play.

The other was the son of parents in only moderate circumstances. His players had to do the best they could for equipment. His team had to practice and play on the public rinks. And naturally they resented what they called the pampered pets of the rich man's son. And just as naturally the wealthy boy's team resented their rivals from across the tracks, because in spite of the better equipment the poor boy's team generally won the games.

That rivalry and that resentment has lasted through a lifetime. Both boys grew up to be great hockey players. Both became managers, and those who know the story or are familiar with the feeling that exists between the two, know how preposterous the idea is of Art Ross, the rich man's son who manages the Boston Bruins, and Lester Patrick, the boy from across the tracks who manages the New York Rangers, ever getting together for any such sinister business as the tepid followers of professional hockey profess to suspect.

shun. He will be the best second baseman in the league"—he paused to glare at a rebel who murmured "best in the Three-I League"—"and Camilli will lead the league in home runs."

After a year's time, how does Brooklyn like Larry MacPhail, the wizard of the Gowanus Canal?

"We like him all right," said Joe. "Last year you didn't have to watch the ball club—which was a break at that. MacPhail allus had flagpole sitters or hoidle races goin' on. It got so the kids was askin' could they come olly and see the elephants."

Was that a crack at big Babe Phelps?

"Naw, the Babe only weighs about 240 this year. Hey, you know what? This spring they got to wonderin' why he allus is gettin' his fingers broke. They find he's been catchin' with his bare hand open. Can y'imagine that? A guy is a big league catcher with the Dodgers and he don't know enough to close his hand."

There were rumors some of the Dodgers weren't as young as they might be.

"Just hangin' on till they get their old-age pensions," Joe agreed. "But we can use guys with good level beans. But them guys ain't pitchers and we need pitchers."

Well, they still have Mungo.

"Yeah, we got him. If we hadda coupla guys that can pitch like Mungo is supposed to pitch we'd be up there. But that big bum. I been waitin' five years to see him win 20 games. If he wins 20 this year I'll buy the house a drink."

"You see," said the bartender, "he's gotta sensa yuma, too."

Mid-Atlantic Golf Schedule Is Made

The Middle Atlantic body discarded handicaps for the amateurs in their tournament schedule that includes eight events, four in Baltimore, three here, and one in Virginia. The card was drawn up in a three-hour meeting following the golf.

No date or site was set for the sectional championship, played the last two years in Old Point Comfort, Va. The Chamberlin Club made no bid for the play this year, and the pros will attempt to get a club to sponsor the tourney at a later date.

The schedule was not as full as previous years, as the District mentors requested several dates for their own tournaments, that will be open to any association member, regardless of section.

Bill Schreiber will be host to a pro-amateur, three partners from scratch at Mount Pleasant April 24, while Rut Coffey was awarded the same type tournament May 15 at his Winchester Club.

Tommy Doerer's Sweepstakes, that is expected to draw a fine field from the National Open, will be held the day following the Open at East Potomac June 12. It is not a Middle Atlantic P. G. A. tourney but is sanctioned by the body.

A pro-lady tournament will be held at Ralph Beach's Suburban course July 10, with the women partners all from Baltimore. A pro-am at Army Navy August 7, an event to be named by Johnny Flattery, will be held August 28 at Rodgers Forge, and pro-ams will follow September 25 at Belle Haven and October 23 at Bonnie View.

The program was voted on by the attending pros, in one of the most successful meetings in years.

On Fishing

We catch summer flounders, called fluke to differentiate the summer flounder from the winter flounder, in most every part of our Chesapeake Bay, but only occasionally. The total commercial catch is below that of a species rated as a Florida inhabitant, the Spanish mackerel, although last year the flounder catch came within several thousand pounds of that of Spanish mackerel.

ACKERMAN

Yet the summer flounder is both a most delicately flavored food fish, and something to talk about when you get him on the end of a line. They supply real sport for hundreds of thousands of anglers along the Atlantic coast. And the species is perfectly at home in our bay waters.

What we would like to see is a stocking in these waters every year until they are well established, by the Maryland Fish Commission, like the one just completed last week in New Jersey waters, when 12,500,000 flounder fry obtained from the Federal hatchery at Woods Hole, were released in the Shrewsbury, Shark, Manasquan and Metedeconk Rivers and the tributaries of Barnegat Bay.

Flounder fishing in Jersey waters has been excellent since the first liberation of fry in 1935-36. In addition the Jersey commission is planting yellow perch fry in southern counties and that might be made the basis for some kind of a trade, for Maryland tidewater rivers are teeming with scrappy "convict" perch, and still rate it a food fish, although many Northern States think its fighting qualities are as game as any fish that swims.

During the last week in March the greatest spawning run of yellow perch in years was at its peak in many Maryland rivers. In the upper reaches of the Severn, where hatcheries have been established by the fish commission, some 1,200 quarts of spawn were gathered and placed in the hatching boxes, and by now have been placed in many other rivers and coves, in furtherance of the plan of Frank Bentz to make many Maryland streams and waters productive of this little gamester that is always a delectable addition to any table.

1,200 quarts—say it quick and it doesn't mean much—only 300 gallons, but when you consider that each quart means approximately 100,000 perch fry, then it is something else, and the total of fish hatched from this one stream will reach about 125,000,000.

Flounder fry is just as easy to take and liberate, and far more to be desired than most of our bay bottom fish.

For the great numbers of anglers who have called or written about Oregon Inlet . . . good news. Single catches have been reported from Hatteras and Buxton, 75 miles down the beach. Oregon Inlet, traditionally the first real point of contact for the big copper colored spot-tail bass, also has seen a catch this week, so the run might be said to be on. However, there is no need to rush right off, for this is the first flush.

On March 28, Charles Perry, veteran guide of Kitty Hawk, took a 50-pounder on surf tackle. The same day, Capt. W. H. Lewark, the surf-fishing Coast Guardsman at Kill Devil Hill Station, hooked nine, ranging from 45 to 50 pounds.

Commercial fishermen have been taking big blues in their nets, although none have as yet been taken in the surf—and probably won't be for several weeks.

A home run by Clarence Pfeil with one on in the first gave the collegians two runs. They added another in the sixth on two Phil errors and a long fly and one more in the seventh on Pfeil's triple and Conway's double.

Trade Heads To Consider Preparedness

Spring Meeting of Executives to Be Held Here May 1 and 2

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Function of industry in national preparedness, anti-trust laws and the Walsh-Healey act as they apply to industry, and relation of Government to business statistics will be considered at the spring meeting of American Trade Association Executives here May 1 and 2.

Industrial mobilization and how trade association groups may help in placing plants on a war basis will be outlined by Col. H. E. Rutherford, director of the planning branch, Army and Navy Munitions Board, under whose guidance supply facilities of the country have been catalogued for immediate use in case the United States becomes involved in war.

Anti-trust statutes as applied to trade association activities will be discussed by Thurman W. Arnold, assistant attorney general in charge of this branch of the Department Justice. Contractual relations between business and Government as regulated by the Walsh-Healey act will be dealt with by L. Metcalfe Walling, administrator of the Division of Public Contracts of the Department of Labor.

200 to Attend

The spring program which is expected to attract upwards of 200 trade association executives to this city will be held in the Mayflower Hotel. A. M. Ferry, secretary of Wire Cloth Manufacturers Association; Bond Geddes, vice president of Radio Manufacturers Association, and John B. Gordon, secretary of the Bureau of Raw Materials for American Vegetable Oils and Fats Industries, compose the committee in charge.

Building Congress

Col. Allison F. H. Scott, vice president and general sales manager, Hoffman Specialty Co., New York, addressed members of Washington Building Congress yesterday at their April luncheon meeting at Lafayette Hotel. Mr. Scott chose "Modern Heating for Modern Living" as his subject, and discussed anthracite, a modern fuel, availability of modern anthracite-burning equipment for both steam, vapor and hot water control systems from the heating system angle.

Col. Scott is well qualified from wide experience to deal with the subject of heating, being a graduate engineer and a consulting engineer for the National Radiator Co., and later connected with American Radiator Co. and Anthracite Industries, Inc. In addition, he has had contact with Government construction projects, having been formerly special assistant to the deputy administrator, Federal Housing Administration, and being on the national advisory board of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association and industry member of the Producers' Council.

Solvent Railroads' 1938 Net Income Was $48,000,000

New York, April 3.—While all Class I railroads, taken as a group, last year failed to earn fixed charges by $122,000,000, this was due almost entirely to the unsatisfactory showing of insolvent roads and those that are now placing interest on a contingent basis under voluntary adjustment plans, according to the Standard Statistics today.

Railroads that have sought neither the protection of the courts nor concessions from bondholders reported a combined net income after fixed and contingent charges of $48,000,000, earning fixed charges an average of 1.13 times. The same roads earned $208,076,000 in 1937, covering fixed charges 1.51 times.

The 35 companies that are now in financial difficulties earned only $57,699,000 toward fixed charges of $218,377,000 last year, or 26 per cent, reporting a deficit after fixed and contingent charges of $170,972,000. In 1937, they earned more than half of their charges, while in 1936 their fixed charge coverage was 66 per cent.

London, April 3.—Stock prices closed firm today with business restricted owing to political factors and the forthcoming Easter holidays. British funds, oils and mining issues moved higher and copper shares were in demand. Leading oil issues were well supported and the metal, aircraft and motor groups moved ahead. Foreign bonds were generally firm and transatlantics finished steady.

Paris—The bourse had a strong tone in late dealings and rentes gained 12c to 24c centimes. Bank of France moved up 185 francs, Royal Dutch, 150, and Suez Canal was active and more than 500 francs higher.

Liverpool—Wheat futures closed weak, 1½ to 1¾d net lower today after a brisk trading session. Less apprehension over the foreign political situation, higher world shipments and limited millers' demand for cash grain were reflected in the liquidating movement. An early advance in cotton futures on the improved political outlook and more encouraging Eastern cables failed to follow through. An unsettling factor was renewed talk of a possible export subsidy on the American crop. Liquidation came from Bombay and the continent and final prices were 1 to 3 points net lower.

Steel Chairman Is Hopeful of Business Rise

Revival of Demand For Heavy Steels Seen by Stettinius

By the Associated Press.

Hoboken, N. J., April 3.—Edward R. Stettinius, jr., chairman of the board of United States Steel Corporation, said today it was hoped that general business would "continue to improve" during this year. "In these times," he told the thirty-eighth annual meeting of U. S. Steel stockholders, "it is venturesome, to say the least, to attempt to forecast the future course of business. However, we are reasonably hopeful concerning the immediate outlook for the steel industry.

"During 1938 the predominating demand was for the so-called lighter steel products, with a subnormal demand for the heavier steel products which are commonly associated with the durable, or capital, goods industries.

"In view of this subnormal demand the finishing capacity of the corporation was unevenly drawn upon during the past year. At the moment there is some evidence of a revival of demand for steel products in the heavier classes. With the return to a more normal demand for such goods the operations of the subsidiary companies should be materially benefitted.

"We hope that general business, which advanced slowly during the latter half of last year, will continue to improve, and that operations eventually will reach such a level as to enable the corporation to show satisfactory earnings on its investment."

Apple Pie and a Film

Stettinus was applauded by an audience of 250 stockholders who packed the fifth floor of the old Hudson Trust Co. Building in which they have met for 38 years. The company entertained them with a movie, apple pie and sandwiches. The apple pie part of the annual meeting has been the tradition of U. S. Steel for many years, but the movie was a new idea. Officials said it was the first in the history of any corporation's annual meeting. The film, a talkie, pictured the construction of the new $70,000,000 Carnegie-Illinois plant near Clairton, Pa.

Robert C. Stanley, chairman and president of International Nickel Co., was elected to the board of directors to succeed Walter S. Gifford, president of American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Stettinus announced that 57.5 per cent of the stock was represented at the meeting. The total number of registered stockholders of the corporation as of January 1 was 219,727. The average holding was 56 shares.

Stettinus told the stockholders he was "gratified to say that our average production rate for the first quarter of this year is around 52 per cent—a figure substantially above the average for the past year. The 1938 production of finished steel for sale averaged 38.2 per cent of rated capacity—about half that of the 71.2 per cent average rate in 1937."

Average Weekly Factory Wages Advance to $26.11

New York, April 3 (AP).—The average factory worker in the United States earned $26.11 a week in February, compared with $25.96 in January and $23.53 in February, 1938, the National Industrial Conference Board said today.

The board, a private research organization supported mainly by corporations, said "real weekly earnings" were 13.7 per cent higher than in February, 1938, and 7.6 per cent higher than in 1929. This was explained as partly the result of a moderate decline in the cost of living in the past year.

The highest weekly average wage in the manufacturing industries covered in the survey was $35.52 in newspaper and magazine printing, followed by $33.37 in rubber tire and tube manufacturing.

Late Selling Offsets Early Rise; Domestic Business Is Disappointing; Six Treasury Bonds at New Highs

New York, April 3.—A higher market in London for American securities, due partly to the advances scored here Saturday when the London exchange was closed, encouraged buying at the opening today but stocks had difficulty holding their lead. Later selling, according to representative Wall Street opinion, was based more on the lack of improvement in domestic business than to any new turn for the worse in European affairs. The list closed virtually unchanged for the day, up 0.02 point in the composite average, but considerably nearer to its low than to the highs established on the opening bulge. Trading amounted to 1,472,610 shares.

Discouragement over the inability of business to rally is the immediate cause of bearish sentiment in the Street. After the strong close of 1938, and a good January, the indices of business have held to their downward course and recently they have displayed no tendency to reverse the course. Statistical services report that inventories generally are at a low level, but not so low that there must be any nearby rush to buy.

Auto Market

Some hesitancy in the market for new automobiles is seen as partly responsible for the falling off of steel buying and estimates on the expected rate of operations for the next three months have been revised downward. Steel shares were affected today by the decline in operations of 1.4 points, or 2.5 per cent, to 54.7 per cent of capacity. This statistical report tended to offset the optimism that pervaded the annual meeting of the United States Steel Corporation.

The manner in which mounting costs of government are burdening business was illustrated again today by the remarks of the chairman of the steel corporation who pointed out that the corporation's 1938 tax bill was equivalent to $5.61 a share on United States Steel common stock. Over the last seven years, taxes paid by the corporation to various collecting agencies probably would approximate $35 a share on the common, a period in which investors in such stock received $1 a share in dividends. While brain trusters are looking around for a reason to explain the difficulty of opening up the capital market they might consider this, for capital might as well go into tax-exempt bonds or lie idle in the banks as take a risk for the sake of the tax collector.

Harry Hopkins, who was ushered into the Secretaryship of Commerce with a blare of trumpets a few months ago, and who was going to take business out of its slump, finally got around to making a specific suggestion on this problem today. Little has been heard from Mr. Hopkins since he accepted the above portfolio, but now he proposes the establishment of research centers throughout the country to study and deal with the problems of little business. They couldn't very well deal with any other type.

On this subject Mr. Hopkins said he had been meeting with a committee representing the Conference of State University Schools of Business. We do not know what the savants of the State univerities told him but imagine it was pleasanter to listen to than the words he would have heard if he had talked with the leaders, rather than the theorists, of business, who, like the steel corporation mentioned above, find they are working for the tax collector rather than for the investors who have saved and done their bit for the capital market.

Steel was the most active stock in today's trading and was off a small fraction. Republic and Bethlehem closed with fractional gains. Motors and Chrysler lost slightly, and United States Rubber was down more than a point.

Bonds Higher

Listed bonds moved generally higher today, led by United States Government issues, six of which closed at new highs for the year. Domestic issues were led by the high grade rails, while foreign issues showed increases up to 2½ points.

Long term Treasury bonds led the rise, gains of ½ point being recorded, with the majority of the Government issues advancing ¾ point or more. In the foreign list the Copenhagen '33s jumped 2½ points and the 4½s 1½ points. The Belgium 7s of '55 were up 1¼ and the Denmark 4½s advanced 1⅛.

Southern Pacific 4s of 1955 were up ½ and those of 1949 gained 1⅛ points. Chicago & Eastern Illinois, Chicago & Great Western and Kansas City Southern issues showed gains. The Illinois Central refunding 5s of 1955 dropped 12½ points to a new low for the year.

Gains were frequent in the industrial section. Certain-teed 5½s advanced 2⅜. R. K. O. 6s were up 2 and Richfield Oil 4s of 1949 gained 1½ points; utilities were firm, Utilities Power and Light issues advancing 1⅜ points and Consolidated Edison issues were higher.

Capital Holds World's Lead as Telephone User

New York, April 3 (AP).—Washington has more telephones for its size than any other big city in the world, according to a statistical report by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. The record for 1938 was 38.82 for every 100 persons. San Francisco, with 36.17, and Stockholm, Sweden, with 36.08, ranked next.

Americans in Europe, according to the same report, found the telephone situation pretty different overseas. Back home there were 15.09 telephones for every 100 people—including babies—but in the United Kingdom there were only 6.41 per 100; in Germany, 5.31; in France, 3.7, and in Italy, 1.38. Why, in some of the countries there weren't even telephones in the American bars.

Continental United States, at the time of the survey, had 49.57 per cent of the world's telephones, and when the telephones in Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico and other American areas are included, the total comes so close to half the world's total that only a statistician could tell the difference.

Americans answered their telephones at the rate of 900 calls every second, day and night, throughout the year.

Failures Decline

New York, April 3 (AP).—Business faiuures in the United States during the week ended March 30 dropped to 260, the first decline in four weeks, from 301 in the previous week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. A year ago they amounted to 282.

Cotton Advances As Senate Passes Bankhead Act

New York, April 3 (AP).—Cotton futures quickly responded today to breaking of the Washington stalemate on cotton legislation with Senate passage of the Bankhead act. A last-hour buying flurry left final prices 6 to 7 points ahead. Contracts were supplied largely by Bombay dealers in the late dealings, while earlier pressure was also credited to foreign interests.

A generally bullish interpretation of the Bankhead bill, brokers declared, was based on two considerations: The bill would be an effective check to an export subsidy measure; and farmers would have to cut new production to comply with certain provisions of the act.

Phila. & Reading Coal & Iron Plans Reorganization

Philadelphia, April 3 (AP).—Formation of a new company to replace the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co. and redistribution of the securities of the $95,000,000 corporation are the outstanding features of a reorganization plan filed in the United States District Court today.

The suggestion is backed by the four principal bondholders' committees of Philadelphia and New York and is an important step in clearing the financial affairs of the big anthracite-producing company. Reorganization started February, 1937.

The new company would have three classes of securities. They are general mortgage income bonds, preferred shares and common shares. Each holder of $1,000 of the present refunding mortgage bonds would receive $700 worth of the income bonds, 40 preferred shares and 5 common shares. All refunding mortgage bonds owned by the present company would be canceled.

Five Managers Named

Each holder of $1,000 of debenture bonds would receive $150 of the income bonds, 17 preferred shares and 36 common shares. The 56,000 common shares of the new company would be issued to the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co., the holder of all of the capital stock of the present Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co.

The plan names five managers to handle the reorganization, if finally approved. They are George W. Norris, Arthur V. Morton and Schofield Andrews, of Philadelphia, and Jacques Cohen and James Jay Kann, of New York.

Copper was at the high for 1938 at the October price of 11.25 cents. The year's low was 9 cents in May.

Hitler Figures In $15,000 Suit Against U. S.

Court Must Rule if Coup Made Austrian Woman a German

A knotty diplomatic question of Austria's status as a part of Greater Germany was dropped in the lap of the District Court yesterday when the Jewish wife of an Austrian physician asked to be saved from German citizenship. If she is found to be a German, she may lose $15,000.

The complainant is Mrs. Helene Weiss, who fled from Austria in March, 1938, to Teplitz-Shonau, Czecho-Slovakia, only to have Hitler's conquest catch up with her again. She now is believed to be in Prague.

Mrs. Weiss seeks to recover $15,000 in Union Pacific stock dividends which have accumulated in this country since the World War. Her suit is directed against Attorney General Murphy and U. S. Treasurer Julian.

The shares were seized by this country under the trading with the enemy act of 1917. After the war, however, refunds to Austrian citizens of their property were ordered, Stanley said, when Austria posted a fund to guarantee payments of American claims against the Vienna government. The order to return Mrs. Weiss' money was ready for signing, Stanley said, when Hitler seized Austria.

Although Mrs. Weiss escaped the Nazis, her funds were estopped, since a 1934 Congressional resolution forbade return of seized German property in retaliation for German failure to pay American claims. Mrs. Weiss' check was held up pending a determination of whether she was a German.

Her complaint asks that the money be paid since the United States has never recognized the legality of Hitler's Austrian conquest.

U. S. Agent Tells Court Story of Torrio's Power

New York, April 3—A British-born undercover agent for the United States Government today pictured Johnny Torrio, on trial in Federal Court for income tax evasion, as a powerful and subtly influential boss rum-runner during the prohibition era.

The witness, Thomas W. Murray, put Torrio high in the old coastal liquor oligarchy.

His most direct testimony against Torrio, who is accused by the government of having evaded some $86,000 in income taxes for the years 1933-34-35, concerned the Coast Guard's seizure in 1931 of a rum-runner called the Josephine K. with 2,500 cases of Newfoundland liquor aboard.

At that time, said Murray, he was wireless operator for the syndicate controlling the Josephine K. When she fell into the Coast Guard's hands, Murray added.

These "certain people" were not identified, but in any case, Murray testified, the Josephine K shortly was returned to the syndicate under bond and put back into use until the end of prohibition.

Harrison Urges New Tribunal on Transport Subsidy

By the Associated Press.

George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association, urged yesterday that a "new tribunal" with "unprejudiced minds" investigate transportation subsidies.

He testified before a Senate Interstate Commerce sub-committee on bills by Senators Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, and Truman (Democrat), Missouri, which would extend the Interstate Commerce Commission's rate-making powers to water and air transportation. The agency now regulates railroad and motor carrier rates.

The Wheeler-Truman measures also direct the I. C. C. to investigate transportation subsidies. Harrison said that highway and waterway carriers were subsidized and that this was giving them an "unfair advantage."

Yankee Clipper At Marseilles

Marseilles, France, April 3 (U.P.)—Capt. Harold Gray and technicians of the 41-ton Yankee Clipper, which landed here today from Bordeaux, are studying proposals to make the Marignane air base here the southern European terminal for Atlantic flights of Pan American Airways.

The clipper will take off Tuesday for Southampton, England, en route home by way of Foynes, Ireland.

Auto Deaths Climb, Accidents Decrease Slightly in March

Fatality Toll for Year Thus Far Is 26, Five Ahead of 1938; 880 Traffic Mishaps in Month

Two more persons were killed in Washington traffic last month than in March, 1938, although accidents and injuries showed a slight decrease, the Department of Vehicles and Traffic announced.

Four persons were killed in March, as against two a year ago. A total of 880 accidents were reported last month, and 283 persons were injured. Figures for the same month last year were 898 accidents and 303 injuries. Thus far this year, 26 persons have been injured fatally, as against 21 in 1938.

Meanwhile, two motorists yesterday were held under the negligent homicide act after inquests into the week-end traffic deaths of Miss Ella Martin, 66, of 2301 Thirty-ninth street northwest, and William Armstrong, colored, 40, of 2530½ F street northwest.

In the first case, the coroner's jury decided that Lionel W. Hodges, 33, 1507 M street northwest, was operating a mail truck in a negligent manner when Miss Martin was knocked down in the 1700 block Pennsylvania avenue northwest March 28.

At the second inquest, John O. Hall, 32, of East Falls Church, Va., was held in connection with Armstrong's death. The colored man was struck at Thirtieth and Q streets northwest Saturday.

Politicians, Priests Opposed Christ, Theologian Avers

Dr. Robert F. Bauer, graduate of Union Theological Seminary, last night before the Optimist Club at Universalist National Memorial Church discussed "The Trial of Jesus Before Pilate and the Jewish Court."

Stressing that the common people were overwhelmingly in favor of Jesus, Dr. Bauer said that "hired hoodlums," politicians, ecclesiastics and men of power were opposed to Him. It was the old story of the mystic persecuted by intellectuals, materialists and men of power, he added.

"Jesus had only unlearned men as disciples because He knew men of book learning and of power had too many prejudices to overcome," Bauer pointed out.

Rehearing Ordered

Investigation was said to have disclosed that the plant employed minors under 16 years of age.

St. Louis, April 3 (A.P.).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals held today the National Labor Relations Board denied Montgomery Ward & Co., a fair trial on company union charges at its Kansas City plant and remanded the case for rehearing before another examiner.

In the opinion, written by Judge Kimbrough Stone, the court severely criticized the conduct of Trial Examiner James C. Paradise.

"We cannot escape the conclusion," the opinion stated, "that in the hearing the company was denied that fairness which is required by due process of law . . .

Order Set Aside

"Responsibility for this situation rests primarily on the examiner."

The order which was set aside required the company to cease lending financial aid or other support to the Union of Ward Employes, and directed it not to discourage membership in the United Mail Order and Retail Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Today's hand was contributed by A. F. W., who played it in a rubber game and made a grand slam at hearts. The bidding which A. F. W. says he does not indorse is presented with the hand in the box. Plan your own campaign before reading how A. F. W. won thirteen tricks. For those who may not be familiar with the Vienna Coup let us assure you that it is only a high-sounding name for the rather simple play of cashing a high card, thereby establishing a card in the adversary's hand with the intent of later squeezing him of it.

Of the bidding, A. F. W. says:

"I don't think North had any better than a two no-trump bid: certainly not a good two-spade bid.

"As you see from the location of the cards, both the diamond and spade finesses are wrong. However I received a favorable opening of a small club. I took the first trick with the jack of clubs, played two rounds of hearts and then the king of clubs. I ran three more rounds of trumps went to the board with a small spade to the ace, and then took the ace of clubs, discarding a small diamond from my hand. I returned to my hand with the king of spades creating this situation:

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
7 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 4 ♣.

"I laid down the last trump, throwing the spade jack from the dummy and East was squeezed, having to discard either the queen of spades or unguard the king of diamonds.

"Not knowing the location of the thirteenth spade and there being a possibility that it was held by West, East threw the queen of spades, which made my nine good, and the last trick was taken with the ace of diamonds."

The Vienna Coup was made when declarer cleared the spade ace and king establishing the queen in East's hand, but leaving the nine in South as a threat card for the squeeze. The spade jack while it was of value because it promoted South's nine, had actually no part in the squeeze.

The Federal Diary has been changed in its form with the aim of devoting it principally to the activities, recreational and otherwise, of Federal employes in Washington. REMOVAL of alleged needless age limits in the Federal Civil Service as applied to middle-aged applicants was urged yesterday by civil service committees of the New York State Conference of Polish Clubs and the State League of Economics in letters to Senator Bulow and Representative Ramspeck, chairmen of the Senate and House Civil Service Committees.

REPRESENTATIVE Gearhart (Republican), of California, will be guest speaker on the Army Day Americanism and Defense Program at meeting of the American Legion Victory Post at 8 p. m., Thursday at 414 Ninth street northwest. A high ranking Legionnaire, he is himself an overseas World War veteran.

LANKY, good-natured Malcolm Ross, director of publications for the National Labor Relations Board, is being covered with orchids on account of his latest book—"The Death of a Yale Man."

How and when he does it nobody knows. Three or four novels, a book on gliding, "Machine Age in the Hill"—and now this autobiographical volume which is also an "explanation of the theory of labor in a democracy."

Written during a period when NLRB and Ross both have had their hands full, this book promises to be one of the best read books of the spring and summer.

CREDIT for the Marian Anderson recital from the Lincoln Memorial steps should go, they are saying around town, to Edward Bruce, chief of the fine arts section of the Treasury. He's supposed to have suggested the whole thing to Secretary Ickes—who acted on it pronto.

FEDERAL art at the World's Fair in New York will be something worth seeing, despite many mediocre panels used on the building fronts, according to the best rumors. Especially are the art leaders taking pride in the 107-foot panel done by George Harding.

SOME OF the women at the Indian Bureau are busy buying their annual supply of prints for the dresses of little Indian girls in Government schools out on the reservations. It's one of the things we like best about the Indian Bureau—the care it takes to keep all the little maidens from being dressed exactly alike.

Bob Burns Says—

Hollywood sure is a wonderful place but I guess I never will be able to fit into the plan of things out here. I just can't see how some of these Hollywoodites stand the gaff. First they go to an early morning breakfast at somebody's house, then there's horseback riding through the parks, then there's a round of golf, then there's a luncheon at some club, then there's an afternoon tea some place, and then from the tea they go to a cocktail party and then from the cocktail party they go to dinner, after dinner there's a theater party, and after the theater party they go to some night-club where they dance 'til dawn. I guess it's just what ya get used to.

I remember my last trip back home Uncle Hod says, "Robin, this has been the most excitin' week and I'm all tuckered out. Monday we shucked the corn; Tuesday was Slug's birthday; Wednesday I lost a tooth; Friday we had pork chops; yesterday I had my hair cut, and now here we are rushing off to church."

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

One Less to Worry About

One careless minute that you spend
Is long enough your life to end.
—Old Mother Nature.

How sadly true that is. A minute is such a very small space of time that it doesn't seem possible that within its brief compass the world can end. Yet it can, and all too often does it for those who are careless.

Mrs. Peter Rabbit was the mother of five of the cutest little bunnies that ever kicked up heels and twitched wobbly little noses. She was proud of them. Also she was very much worried on their account. Probably Peter was proud of them too, but they didn't worry him much. You see he was quite willing to leave all the care of them, and all the worrying over them, to their mother.

So Mrs. Peter had five worries, but one of them was a greater worry than the other four together. He was smart. That was the trouble—he was too smart. He learned so quickly and so easily that, as so often happens with smart children, he soon began to think that he knew as much as his elders. The result was that no sooner was his mother's back turned than he was going somewhere or doing something that he had been warned against.

Whenever he got a chance he would slip outside the dear Old Briar-patch, where he was safe, to the nearest patch of clover or tender new grass. There he wasn't safe. Anyway his mother didn't think he was safe there. If Harrier the Marsh Hawk or Mrs. Harrier should surprise him out there he would have no chance at all. He would be picked up and carried off to feed hungry young Hawks who seemed never to get enough to eat. Mrs. Peter warned him and warned him, but apparently the warnings went in one funny little ear and out the other.

Now this little Rabbit really was smart. He didn't just think himself smart. He was smart. He was observing. Observation is one of the best teachers in all the Great World. You know that. So without appearing to do so, he watched his father when Peter was about and copied him in all that he did. He did the same way with his mother. So after a while he did certain things under certain circumstances quite without thought on his part.

Mrs. Peter knew that those Marsh Hawks knew of those five baby Rabbits. She knew by the frequency with which they flew over and around the dear Old Briar-patch. She knew that they were hoping to find one outside. So she warned the bunnies that these two big birds who came so often came for no good purpose, and that the only safe place for little Rabbits was in the dear Old Briar-patch where brambles and briars keep those Hawks away.

Four bunnies were quite content to stay there and Mrs. Peter worried less and less about them. But that other one, that smart one, slipped out whenever he got the chance.

Then came an afternoon when the disobedient one saw a chance to run over to a patch of clover where he often had seen his father. It wasn't far from the dear Old Briar-patch, but any distance at all was too far if one of those Hawks should surprise a young Rabbit. That clover was good. It certainly was good. Perhaps it tasted better because the naughty bunny knew that he was naughty. But as I have said before, he was too smart. He was smart enough not to forget for one instant where he was and to watch for the approach of possible danger. Between nibbles he was constantly popping up for a look around. And so it was that he saw Harrier the Marsh Hawk, flying low just above the grass, he came around one end of the Briar-patch. That little Rabbit didn't try to run. Like a flash he flattened himself in the clover and lay motionless. He had once seen Peter do this.

Harrier didn't see him, but he did see one of the others who for just one little minute was careless and in playing ran just outside the edge of the Briar-patch. He didn't mean to do it. He was just careless. But when mother returned there was one less bunny to worry about, and it wasn't the wilfully disobedient one.

Ruffle up for Easter

in RO-JENE'S Victorian Lingerie

It's the prettiest lingerie we've seen since the turn of the century. Frills, frou-frou, lace, even old-fashioned batiste are in the picture again. Gowns have become quaint as your "little-girl" dresses. Slips play peek-a-boo with skirts once more. And we think they're all so charming that we've rounded up a star-collection in Bemberg rayon Citadel crepe and silk and Bemberg rayon satin and Bemberg rayon sheers and rayon taffetas just in time for Easter giving.

GOWNS $3

There's More To A Suit Than Is Shown To The Naked Eye

IT'S a good old American tradition to play a winner to the end. Baseball teams never break up a winning combination. And we, at The Hecht Co., have found the winning clothing combination for the men of Washington. After much experimenting, testing, accepting and rejecting, we've selected the favored few that stood the gaff. These famous names have achieved high repute with men who know what "dressing well" means.

WASHINGTON men say "Sheldon" . . . "Society Brand" . . . and "Worsted-tex" as familiarly as they say "Ham and Eggs." They've learned that quality comes from within! The Fabrics, the Designing and the Workmanship are inner qualities symbolized by the celebrated labels pictured at the left. And these are the inner qualities you will find in every Hecht Co. garment.
